"SPARE THE PEOPLE."

"If Not, God Spare the Czar!"—Victor Hugo's Manifesto.

A War With the Basutos Imminent—Disturbances at Cracow—Seven Cardinals to be Created—Foreign News.

Germany.

BERLIN, March 8.—The Lower House of the Prussian Diet has passed the Government bill establishing a legation at the Vatican.

SPECULATING ON WAR.

LONDON, March 8.—The Czar has sent congratulations to the new King and Queen of Servia. The establishment of the new dominion is regarded with favor by all the European powers save Turkey. The Czar in this communication expresses publicly his good will and friendly relations with Germany, but at the same time the German newspapers and associations openly discuss the probabilities of war with Russia and point to what advantages Germany might gain in such a conflict. The Kleine Gazette, inspired sometimes by the Prussian Foreign Office, proposes the annexation by Germany of East Siberia and Saghalien in the event of a victorious war with Russia.

France.

PARIS, March 8.—M. Victor Hugo has issued a protest against the sentence passed on the Nihilists at St. Petersburg. He says civilization ought to interfere, and warns the Czar: "Spare the people. If not—God spare the Czar!"

STOCK COMPANIES.

PARIS, March 8.—It is said that since the subsidence of the crisis from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 francs worth of stock, chiefly of the least speculative kinds, have been absorbed by the investing public, and that large amounts have been offered the promoters of the revival of the Union Generale.

Austro-Hungary.

LONDON, March 8.—A dispatch from Vienna says: "It is rumored that the English Government has proposed a conference to settle the Bosnian question."

DISTURBANCE AT CRACOW.

VIENNA, March 8.—The authorities of Cracow, learning of an intended demonstration by the students of that city against the sentence of death recently passed on the ten Nihilists at St. Petersburg, attempted to suppress it. In doing so a fight ensued, in which two students and four gendarmes were killed.

UNDER ARREST.

The Austrian Commander at Ragusa has placed Mr. Evans, an English war correspondent, under arrest, claiming that, notwithstanding orders to the contrary, he was sending information to his paper, the publication of which would give aid and comfort to the enemy.

England.

LONDON, March 8.—The Times' St. Petersburg special declares Gen. Skobeleff's speeches were prearranged between him and Gen. Ignatieff. It is said the object of the latter is to embroil matters to such a degree as to create the opportunity for him to offer his services to the Czar as Minister of Foreign Affairs in order to straighten them.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

The trial of Dr. George H. Lamson, charged with poisoning his brother-in-law, commenced to-day. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

AN INVENTION.

LONDON, March 8.—The report about the convention between Germany and France for the annexation by the latter of Luxembourg is an invention.

MACLEAN.

LONDON, March 8.—The would-be assassin MacLean has been identified as the man who last summer frequented the vicinity of Windsor Castle and acted in a suspicious manner.

STEALING A PICTURE.

LONDON, March 8.—At the Old Bailey to-day James Harris, aged 38 years, a painter, was convicted of stealing from the residence of John Derby, Allcroft, near Lancashire Gates, Hyde Park, a picture known as "Monarch of the Meadows," valued at £5[illegible]0. The picture was cut from the frame on the [illegible]th of September, 1881, while the house was being repaired. Harris was employed there at the time.

Italy.

ROME, March 8.—At the approaching consistory the Pope will create seven new Cardinals, including the most Rev. Dr. McCabe, Archbishop of Dublin. It is understood this expresses the Pope's approval of the efforts Archbishop McCabe made in behalf of the cause of law and order in Ireland.

South Africa.

LONDON, March 8.—A dispatch from the Cape of Good Hope says: "A war is iminent between the Basutos and the Cape Colonists."

Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—The Czar has privately received General Skobeleff at Gatschina.

DISBANDED.

Detectives in League with Criminals, Burglars and Thieves.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 8.—The Corps of the Central Office of Detectives in this city has been disbanded and the department abolished by order of Mayor King, because of charges that the officers of the department were in league with and controlled by burglars and other criminals. Official detective work will be hereafter done by special officers of each police district.

Small-Pox Prevailing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GALLIPOLIS, O., March 8.—Small-pox is prevailing here to an alarming extent in the vicinity of Morgan and Center. There are forty or more cases reported and there have been four deaths in the last three days. The disease was taken for chicken pox and other cutaneous affections and has been treated with the simplest remedies with its contagious character unsuspected.

Found Murdered.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., March 8.—John O. Massey and wife, an aged couple living near here and possessed of considerable means, were found murdered this morning in the house and the money gone.

Died.

LOUISVILLE, March 8.—Henry C. Pindell, a prominent lawyer of this city, died this forenoon, aged 52.

Omaha News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, NEB., March 8.—The trial of Charles Kosters, charged with murdering Oscar Hammer, of Chicago, last Christmas, was begun in the District Court this morning. The jury panel has already been exhausted and fifty extra jurymen ordered to be drawn. It is doubtful about getting a jury even from this number, as there is great excitement here concerning the case and competent jurymen are scarce. Kosters was first indicted for murder in the second degree, but the grand jury was afterwards declared illegal and a new one formed which returned a bill for murder in the first degree. It will be a very hard fought and exciting trial.

THE STRIKERS

are getting ready for a grand parade at two o'clock. They expect to make a great demonstration. The Molders' Union, Bricklayers' Union and other labor organizations not in the strike are expected to march with them. The smelting works yielded to the demand for twenty-five cents advance yesterday without permitting the men to strike. The strikers expect to get the Plattsmouth laborers now at work here to quit to-day or to-morrow, and are very hopeful of the final result. The weather is temperate and a light snow is falling.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Both Assassinated in Their Own House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MT. VERNON, KY., March 8.—An unknown man went to the house of Mary Sigman, walked into the room where she and her five children, with her mother, were sleeping. He first shot dead Mary Sigman, and then left the room, but soon returned and sent a fatal ball through the body of her mother, about 80 years old. There were nine wounds in the body of Mary Sigman, five of which were sufficient to cause death. The assassin fired fifteen shots in all. There is no doubt that he had confederates. James Bishop, a rough looking character, who came here last Friday from Tennessee, has been arrested, charged with the murder. He is now in jail, and his preliminary trial is set for Friday.

THE MISSOURI BANDIT.

Jesse James Mortally Wounded and Ed. Miller Killed.

Seven of the Sheriff's Posse Killed and Three Wounded—A Desperate Struggle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—A special to the Daily News from Kansas City says a passenger who arrived this morning on the Wabash train relates that while the train was waiting at Moberly Junction a Sheriff's officer, worn out and

SPLATTERED WITH MUD,

arrived from the West, and told a most remarkable story, which, if true, will cause rejoicing in railroad circles. The officer referred to said Jesse James was captured last night at some point in Kansas, he could not remember the exact location. Jesse James and a comrade, supposed to be Ed. Miller, were in heavy timber. The relator was one of the pursuing party. While trying to force an entrance to the cabin from the outside seven of his party were killed and three wounded. James and Miller made a desperate resistance. The fight was brief but bloody. The Sheriff's officer claimed Ed. Miller was instantly killed and that and is mortally wounded. The attack was a complete surprise to Jesse James and his companions but they were so securely barricaded that the attack was a disastrous one for the Sheriff's posse. An attempt is being actively made to corroborate the statement given above and to obtain fuller particulars.

SURROUNDED IN A LOG CABIN

The Linseed Oil Companies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Consolidated Linseed Oil Company are holding a special meeting in this city to-day. The meeting is strictly private, but it is understood the purpose is to discuss a revision of the price lists. There are fifty-five linseed oil manufacturing houses represented in the consolidation, the territory of which covers the entire West. At the meeting now in progress thirty-six manufactories have representatives attending. E. M. Wood, of Dayton, Ohio, is President. The Straw Board Manufacturer's Association of America met here to-day and arranged the details of the annual meeting, which will be held at the White Mountains, June 21st.

Freight Rates.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Commissioner Midgely has issued a joint freight tariff on business of the Southwestern railroads east-bound, to take effect March 13 from Missouri River points. These rates are to Mississippi River points: First-class, 60 cents; second, 45; third, 39; fourth, 20; fifth, 19; sixth, 20; seventh, 20; eighth, 15; ninth 20; wheat, 17; other cereals, 12½. From the same points to Chicago and Milwaukee, first-class, 75 cents; second, 60; third, 45; fourth, fifth and sixth, 27; seventh, 25; eighth, 19; ninth, 25½; tenth, 25; wheat, 21; other grain, 16½. From the same points to Toledo and Detroit the rates range from 99½ down to 22½. The rate on wheat is 27.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—For Tennessee and Ohio Valley, cloudy weather and rain, northeast to southeast winds, lower barometer, slight rise in temperature. Lake Region, snow and rain with generally cloudy, slightly warmer weather, falling barometer and east to south winds. Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, occasional light rain and snow, east to south winds, falling barometer, cloudy, rising temperature. Lower Mississippi and Cumberland rivers, below Nashville, continue to rise.

Sprague Estate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 8.—The Supreme Court to-day decided that all property of the Sprague estate should be sold at auction in bulk. The date of sale has not yet been fixed. It was agreed the trustee should prepare and submit to the court the form of deed which he thinks he can give, so that all bidders may know what kind of a deed they bid for.

Urging Relief.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 8.—A public meeting of the Board of Trade adopted the following:

Resolved, This board respectfully urges upon Congress the propriety of making a sufficient appropriation to enable the War Deportment to continue its work of relieving the pressing wants of sufferers by the overflow of the Mississippi River.

Mr. Allen's Condition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—There is little change in the condition of Mr. Allen. His family report him as having rested quite comfortably last night and his condition somewhat improved.

The Glucose Industry.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Western delegation appeared before the Ways and Means Committee this morning and made argument against the bill which proposes to impose a tax on glucose. They claimed the only substantial opposition to the glucose proceeds from the sugar refiners, and maintained the glucose industry is a growing one in the West; that it affords a large market for the products of the country, and ought to be encouraged and not discouraged.

Discouraged Committees.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The House committees are becoming somewhat discouraged. Nearly every one of their recommendations, aside from the appropriation bills, has been rejected by the House. The latest instance was yesterday's action on the resolution for a junketing trip to New Orleans, which was dreadfully slaughtered.

ARTHUR AND CONKLING.

It is whispered Conkling's declination may lead to a rupture between himself and Arthur, as it is believed he urged in his letter of declination the appointment of Clarence Seward, but that the President is determined not to appoint him.

A QUARTER OF A MILLION RELIEF.

The bill is to be reported by the committee to-day for a quarter of a million for aid to the Mississippi valley sufferers, who now number nearly 70,000 people, and it will pass very promptly.

DANENHOWER'S EXPERIENCES IN SIBERIA.

A letter received by W. W. Danenhower from his son details the experiences of the party. After leaving the Jeannette, he traveled 700 miles over the ice to reach the Lena. They were one time five days and four nights without sleep. The trip from the mouth of the Lena to Yakutsk took a month. They found three log stations on the way, in the best of which were twenty people around a dead horse, thawing it out to cut up for food. The Governor at Yakutsk entertained the party Christmas Eve.

The memorial of the Iowa Legislature for $7,000,000 for the improvement of the Missouri River was presented to the Senate.

CABINET SPECULATIONS.

The rumor that Hatton is to succeed Howe and the latter to succeed Kirkwood, is revived.

UNSEATING A DEMOCRAT.

There is said to be a probability of unseating Mr. Shelley, Democrat, of the Fourth Alabama District, by the committee, and the seating of Mr. Smith, Republican.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Under yesterday's decision forty-four bills have to be passed or laid aside before Kasson's tariff commission bill can be reached.

ST. LOUIS DELEGATION.

The St. Louis River Convention Committee is before the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi. An argument was made similar to that of yesterday.

SIMON CAMERON.

Simon Cameron reached the 83d year of his age to-day. He is reported in excellent health. He was first elected to the Senate in 1845.

Contest Over Apollinaris Water.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—There is a sharp fight in progress here between the proprietors of domestic mineral waters and the owners and agents of the Apollinaris water. Attorney-General VacVeagh decided that Apollinaris is an artificial water and therefore dutiable. Secretary Folger recently reversed this decision and decided that Apollinaris was entitled to enter this country without payment of custom dues. A resolution is pending in Congress directing the Secretary of the Treasury not to take any steps toward carrying out his decision until there can be thorough investigation as to whether Apollinaris is to be placed on the free list. Able legal talent has been employed on both sides. Ex-Senator Conkling is said to be counsel for the Apollinaris interests, and to have received a cash fee of $50,000.

MOVE FOR THE ELECTION OF POSTMASTER, ETC.

Senator Saunders, of Nebraska, submitted to-day a joint resolution for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States that will allow the people to elect all postmasters, Internal Revenue officers, United States marshals and district attorneys.

Senator Saunders is a member of the Committee on Civil Service Reform, and he says that after studying this subject carefully he is satisfied that his resolution embodies reform in its most practical shape. He claims that to make these offices elective by the people would relieve the President of much annoyance and vexation that attaches to his office and would also be a great relief to members of Congress. He says half of the time of Congressmen is taken up in attending to the distribution of Federal offices, and the President complains the duty of filling the petty offices of the Government imposes the heaviest burden on him. Mr. Saunders thinks this can be remedied by giving to the people the power to choose their own officers, and if they make any mistakes they will soon rectify them. The Senator will call up the resolution at the first opportunity and submit some remarks in its favor.

Postal Order.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—The Postmaster-General has directed that after July 1st no allowance will be made Postmasters for advertising dead letters, unless authority is first obtained from the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

XLVII. CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Mr. Garland introduced a bill for the construction, completion and preservation of levees on the Mississippi River temporarily repaired.

Mr. Jackson reported the original bill appropriating $25,000 to continue the improvements of Memphis Harbor, Tenn.

The bill for a commission on the alcoholic liquor traffic came up and Mr Bayard's motion to commit it to the Finance Committee was rejected; yeas 19, nays 26. The vote was a party one except that Mr. Cameron, of Wisconsin, voted aye with the Democrats, and Mr. George and Mr Davis, of Illinois, voted no with the Republicans. The bill was then read and pending the motion by Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, to amend so as to prevent the commission from being exclusively partisan, the morning hour expired, and the bill was laid aside.

House.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Mr. Reed, from the Committee on Rules, reported amendments to the rules presented by him some days ago and printed in the Record. There have been some slight modifications made, the most important of which is the addition of a clause providing it shall be in order for the House, on motion, to go into committee to designate a bill which shall be first considered. Laid over under the rules.

Mr. Harris reported a bill authorizing the construction of vessels of war for the navy of the United States. Committee of the whole.

In the Hands of a Mob.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, TENN., March 8.—A conflagration occurred here, destroying property valued at $50,000, including six business houses. The fire originated on Market street, and is supposed to have been incendiary. The people burned out were small dealers, carrying but light insurance, and the loss falls more heavily on the sufferers. The city seems to be in the hands of a mob, who seem fully determined to destroy it. A mass meeting was held to devise means of protection.

Fine Art Book Sale.

Catalogues of the sale of Fine Art Books are now ready and can be had of Mr. Shaw at the store, 210 N. Fifth street, or of Hagerty & Dewes, auctioneers. The books will be on view on Thursday and will be sold on Friday and Saturday.

WESTERN UNION.

Quarterly Statement—Annual Report of the Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The quarterly statement of the Western Union Telegraph Company shows a net increase for the quarter ending December 31, 1881, of $1,731,235, which, added to the surplus of October 1 of $629,759, gives $2,360,994; deducting appropriations for dividends, etc., leaves a surplus January 1 of $1,035,273. This statement closes the last quarter of the first year of operations of the company since taking up the American Union and Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies, with the following results for the calendar year of 1881: Gross revenues, $16,868,396; expenses, $9,489,269; net profits, $7,379,127, from which have been appropriated dividends, interest, new construction, etc., $6,492,139, leaving a surplus of $886,988, which, added to the surplus the first of the year, gives a surplus of January 1st as stated above. The net revenue for the quarter ending March 31 is partially estimated at $1,550,000, which added to the surplus and deducting appropriations for dividend, etc., leaves a surplus for the quarter of $1,259,073. A dividend of 1½ was declared payable April 15.

UNION PACIFIC.

At the annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad to-day the following directors were elected: Sidney Dillon, Elisha Atkins, Frederick L. Ames, Ezra H. Baker, S. H. H. Clark, F. Gordon Dexter, David Dows, Greenville M. Dodge, T. T. Eckert, Jay Gould, Solon Humphreys, Russell Sage, Augustus Schell, Wm. L. Scott and John Sharp. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Sidney Dillon was re-elected president, and a quarterly dividend of 1¾ declared. The total earnings this year were $24,258,817; last year $22,455,134. Expenses this year, $12,480,342; last year, $10,545,119. Net earnings this year $11,778,474, against $11,910,015 last year. The decrease in earnings is accounted for by the fact that the company laid $540,749 worth of rails in excess of last year. The debt of the company is $4,035,078, which is more than covered by available bonds, securities and the supplies on hand. The company holds securities in stocks and bonds of other companies for $51,773,930, twenty-two millions of which are quoted at par and pay dividends. Over twenty-five million of these securities net the company 2½ per cent profit per annum. The company owns material on hand valued at $3,164,476 and has saved half a million dollars in the purchase of steel rails. Freight carriage increased 122,859,000 tons for the year. The company recently obtained from the United States Supreme Court a judgment against the United States Government for $2,000,000 back charges, which will be worth in the future at least $500,000 yearly to the company.

THE SITUATION DESPERATE.

More Ravages and Devastation by the Flood.

MEMPHIS, March 8.—The river remains stationary here, with 36 feet on gauge. Passengers who arrived this morning from below report the levee at Helena still intact. Yesterday afternoon a force of 300 men were at work guarding all the weak points. The river then was rising steadily at Austin, Mississippi, between Memphis and Helena. The river had cut through the town, destroying the principal buildings, among the number the Masonic temple, and the Centennial block, a large brick building, is almost demolished, the water being twenty-five feet deep all around it. Several storehouses and dwellings are washed away and carried a distance of half a mile. The loss of stock continues and the situation is hourly growing more desperate.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

A Mother and Three Daughters Perish in a Blizzard.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, March 8.—During the blizzard which continued nearly all last week, the farm house of John Taylor near Meadow Lea was burned down. His wife and three daughters were frozen to death, not being able to find shelter of any kind. Mr. Taylor was also severely frozen. Miss Reid, who was visiting the Taylor family, barely escaped with her life.

A Railroad Muddle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Supreme Court of the United States has set aside the decree made by Judge Drummond under which the Chicago, Danville and Vincennes Railroad was sold to the bondholders for one million five hundred dollars. The purchasers are organizing the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, which seems to be put in an embarrassing position in the decision. Mr. F. W. Huidekoper, ex-president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, said to a reporter that he did not think the decision is as sweeping as foreshadowed in the dispatches, and he did not apprehend any serious trouble for his company. His company had bought the Chicago, Danville and Vincennes in good faith, and he had never heard where a party made a purchase in good faith and was afterwards deprived of the same. When the foreclosure was ordered by the United States Circuit Court, it required a bond of $500,000 to supersede the execution of the decree. This the company failed to give, and accordingly the decree was executed by the judicial sale. The title of the old company was diverted and the property has come to third parties, whose right therein would doubtless be fully protected.

The Murderer at Large.

BOSTON, March 8.—There are many unfavorable complaints of the inaction of the police that allowed the man who murdered Mrs. Bell yesterday to walk away under their eyes without stopping to inquire regarding the trouble at Mrs. Bell's residence. The murderer is still at large. Suspicion points to an ex-police officer in this city.

On a Strike.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The engineers and firemen of the Illinois Midland Road are on a strike for back pay. No freight trains are allowed to run but passenger traffic has not yet been interfered with. It is asserted the road is two months behind time. The lockout at Peoria still continues.

Beat His Wife With a Bootjack.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—A dispatch from Salem, Va., says: John Murphy beat his wife nearly to death with a bootjack and then chopped his own right hand off.

"PECULIAR PRACTICE."

So One Attorney Denounces The Conduct of Another in Open Court.

The Black Case Continued Again To-Day in the Court of Criminal Correction.

And now comes John L. Black into the Court of Criminal Correction to answer a charge of making a corrupt voluntary oath before the great Board of Police Commissioners against Gov. Charles P. Johnson. And also come Charles Noland, Joseph G. Lodge and Charles P. Johnson to prosecute him on the same. And several important witnesses for the State do not come, while Judge Cady and Deputy Sheriff Archie Carr are there already, and a large crowd of lookers-on interested in dark and unknown ways also came to see, and the following is a true report of the performance they then and there did witness in the temple of Justice, where the great aim is to weigh out justice to those accused of grievous crimes.

Mr. Charles Noland, appearing for the State, said: "Your Honor, several important witnesses for the State do not answer. Mr. Steinberg, an important witness, is out of the city and has been for the past ten days. Miss Johnson, also an important witness, is out of the State. Robinson, the short-hand reporter who copied the original affidavit, is not here; neither is Judge Laughlin nor Mr. Jay L. Torrey, both important witnesses. I saw the attorney for the defendant two days ago and then he wanted us to continue the case. We expected to be ready, but could not be as was afterwards found out, and now, I suppose, they will insist upon a trial now that the State is not ready."

F. D. Turner, the defendant's attorney referred to above, said: "We do not insist upon an affidavit from the State for a continuance. We want a speedy trial. Two days ago we wanted a continuance, but they said they were going to trial, and so we prepared. Now we insist on a trial."

Mr. Noland — As I expected. Now, your Honor, there is another matter At the second continuance of this case Mr. Turner, in open court, before a number of attorneys and many witnesses, promised to have the original affidavit in court. Only the day before yesterday he told me that he had parted with the affidavit, which was now in the hands of the defendant. Now, your Honor knows that we cannot force the defendant to produce the affidavit in testimony against himself. Of course the representatives of the State believed that the promise of an officer of the court would be kept, but we are not prepared to meet Mr. Turner, who follows with which we are unacquainted.

THIS PECULIAR PRACTICE OF LAW

Mr. Lodge—Your Honor, Mr. Turner does not deny that he made that promise. Now he is an officer of the court, and I ask your Honor to issue an order compelling him to produce that affidavit or show cause why he does not. We are determined to try this case.

Judge Cady—I have not heard Mr. Turner deny it. It would be useless to deny the statement.

Mr. Noland—I will then ask Mr. Turner in open court whether he will produce that affidavit in court.

Mr. Turner—I will not make any promises. You can ask any question you feel like. I believe it is possible to produce that affidavit, and maybe I will.

This assurance was received with much doubt by the attorneys for the State.

Judge Cady said: "By producing this affidavit much avoidable trouble can be saved. I can't, however, force the defendant to produce the affidavit in testimony against himself, but I will grant a reasonable continuance." April 3 was fixed upon for the next performance. Upon the granting of the continuance Black, who was in attendance, stepped briskly out of the court-room, the healthiest specimen of a convalescent sufferer from sciatica that has been arraigned in the Court of Criminal Correction in a long time. The case was once continued on an uncertified note from a Grinnell, Ill., physician. The history of the affidavit is an interesting one, dating from the beginning of the gambling war, which has been quiet for the past two months. Gov. Johnson in an interview criticised the action of the Board of Police Commissioners in allowing gambling to go on unchecked. On November 8, 1881, he was invited by a subpœna to appear before that body and give his ideas on the question. He appeared and was met by a long list of questions concerning himself and the gamblers, and with two affidavits. One was signed Morgan Boland, and charged him with making advances to Boland, while the latter was vice-president of the board, to form a gambling ring in this city. The other was signed by John L. Black, an employe of Pate's, charging him with making an offer to withhold from attacking the gamblers for $1,000. He at once swore out warrants charging Boland and Black with making corrupt voluntary oaths. Boland was convicted, and his case is now pending in the Court of Appeals. Black was seized with sciatica at Greenville, Ill., and did not recover until a short time ago. The affidavit was in the hands of Chief Kennett and later in those of Black's attorney, Mr. Turner. All this time it was available to the State's representations as documentary evidence against the defendant. Black's attorney promised that he would produce it at the trial, but a few days ago made the startling revelation to the State's attorneys that he had passed the affidavit over to his client. This ends the affidavit business. No process of the court can force him to produce or refrain from destroying it. It was this that Messrs. Noland and Lodge referred to as the "peculiar practice of law."

IMPERFECTION.

She sat, half shaded from the glare
Of common light—a creature rare
And finished with perfection;
From dark crowned head to slender foot,
I looked—no mortal e'er could put
Dispraise in his inspection.

The angel face that men had praised
I closer scanned, with lorgnette raised,
My study not concealing;
She bore it with the proudest ease,
She felt so confident to please,
Such beauty fine revealing.

I wondered if an inner grace
Matched all this loveliness of face,
And used my mental eye-glass;
Its searching crystal only saw
A mind so free from rust or flaw
That I laid down my spy-glass.

I grew to love her, day by day;
She knew it, liked it—woman's way—
Was pleased with the new-comer;
She saw another slave enroll
His heart for her serene control,
And liked me—for a summer.

I was a fool; I sought her heart;
The calm face did not feign or start,
Surprise to seem to cover;
She only said, with candid speech,
She really had not meant to teach
Me to become her lover.

I smile to think that I have learned
(With lorgnette critically turned)
So little worth discerning;
For now I see, without my glass,
One great defect—well, let it pass;
No heart. Was she worth learning?

HISTORIC CHARACTERS.

A Glance at the Thinkers and Statesmen of the Southwest.

"Gath's" New Orleans Letter to Cin. Enquirer.

I was thinking over the public men of the Southwest yesterday, asking myself which of them had been the most influential on his country's civilization and development. Taking the Southwest to be everything below the Tennessee River, between Alabama and the plains, we think of several brilliant people immediately who lived or operated between those limits. It has generally been said that Tennessee is the mother of Southwestern States. The founder was John Sevier, whose family controlled the politics of Arkansas from its admission into the Union down to the civil war, with but few intervals. Then came Sevier's youthful opponent, Andrew Jackson, who in a military point of view was the Washington of the Southwest, and his name was formidable until he died throughout Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas. Almost the last act of his life was to issue a private proclamation to congratulate Texas on coming into the Union, which was carried out under his young disciple, James K. Polk. Although Texas was admitted a few days before Polk came into office, his election compelled that event, and his Administration fought the war with Mexico, which not only protected Texas, but gave us powerful extensions of territory on her west.

Thomas Benton, of Missouri, another Tennessee man, who left Tennessee partly on account of a bloody fight he and his brother had with Jackson, was a remarkable character of this region, but he had unpopular qualities, stirred up unworthy animosities, and his egotism was almost equal to his American historical scholarship. He remains, however, the ablest general writer, prophet and inspirator of the Democracy of the plains, for he was not much an enthusiast on the Texas question, having followed Mr. Van Buren, who pronounced against the Government admitting Texas. Benton turned his attention to a splendid empire west of Missouri, in Oregon, California, Colorado and Kansas. He belongs, therefore, to the North rather than the South, and was so discriminated against in Missouri when Jim Green and several other small-fry divided his raiment. His young proteges, Frank Blair and Montgomery Blair, in the field and the Cabinet, maintained their identity as apostles of the Northern idea.

A man rather overlooked in the Southwest was Gov. Claiborne, the first American Governor of Louisiana. Mr. Cable introduces him in a faint sketch in his novel called "The Grandissimes." He died while the Senator-elect of Louisiana, after having been both Territorial and State Governor. It is his nephew, I believe, who has recently written the "History of Mississippi." Sam. Houston, notwithstanding his remarkable qualities and uniform patriotism and succes, is still very much of a local character, because the rest of the country is but slightly familiar with what has been going on in Texas. The last generation knew Houston much better than the present one.

Two brilliant men in the South were S. S. Prentiss, of Mississippi, and Robert Crittenden, of Arkansas, both of whom, it is said, shortened their days and darkened their bright talents by that dissipation into which young men from the Northern climate were often drawn by their prominence in the far South. Traditions say that Crittenden died on a spree while visiting Prentiss, and Prentiss himself bitterly lamented that he had ever gone South at all and lost the restraints of his New England education. The two celebrated men of Mississippi—Jefferson Davis and John A. Quitman—were both from a more Northern climate. Quitman was of German stock, born at Rhinebeck, on the Hudson River, near the homes of the Livingston family. Davis was born in Kentucky, but a few miles from the birth-place of Abraham Lincoln, and it has been said that both were of poor white stock. Davis, however, was able to get into the regular army when a young man, which supposes some family backing. Up to the rebellion Mr. Davis' record in the Senate and the Cabinet was one of the best from the South. Since the rebellion he appears to have been unable to extricate himself from a series of small fatalities naturally attending a failure like that of which he was the head. Men can be far more right than he was, and yet lose historical approval by the material triumph of their country in consequence of their overthrow. This has been the case in France, to some extent, with Coligny and the Huguenots. In the eyes of all Protestants they were right, but they kept up civil disturbances in France, and that monarchy and nation could only be united and quieted by their suppression, which Richelieu accomplished. How much greater must be the personal failure of the Chief Magistrate of a slavery Republic, particularly since he has had so little cheerfulness in falling into the counter triumph in which his own people have shared. His book belongs to that class of publications which the Puseyites in England read with deep interest, as to whether, if the Reformation had not stopped about one-third of the way in its course, we should not have been considerably better.

The physical heroes of the Southwest during the rebellion were so many, and there was so little of an intellectual or moral kind to distinguish them, that the whole mess is in danger of being confused and forgotten. One of the most remarkable of them, perhaps, was Hindman, of Arkansas, who carpetbagged into that State before the war, with the idea of conquering it by a union of his talents and his ferocity. Though he was a military failure, he prevented the atrocities in his department which were permitted by Sterling Price and others in Missouri, Texas and Louisiana, and he hanged ruffians of his own command, as Burbridge did in Kentucky. Arkansas, since the war, has been rather more orderly than it was before, while the disorders of Missouri since the war have been almost perennial. Hindman was assassinated, like Van Dorn, another capable man in war, the latter by one of his own tribe, who suspected him of intimacy with his wife.

Albert Sydney Johnson is claimed by some to have been the Robert E. Lee of the Southwest, yet I doubt whether he showed any more perseverance or force of character than Pemberton in defending Vicksburg. The romantic nature of Southern writers leads them to suppose from the circumstances of a death like Johnson's that his career, had he been allowed to live, would have been something immense. We only know that he made a mistake like the rest of them, and lost his life, and his fame will only be kept alive by the enormous concussion of Shiloh.

Few of the men whom I have mentioned possessed the capacities truly called statesmanship. A statesman is a man of thinking and laboring faculty, with the knowledge to have his principles sure from the start and the policy to get them full play in affairs. Regarded in this light, I think that perhaps Edward Livingston was the greatest statesman of the Southwest.

Swindling the Bald-Heads.

Danville (Ill.,) Special to Chicago Tribune.

The latest and a very neat swindling operation has just come to light in this city. The confidence operator in this instance was an oily-tongued individual of good address, and represented himself to be the agent or general manager of a corporation located in New York, the owners of a patent hair restorative that would make the hair grow on the baldest pate. He soon learned of the baldest members of the bar, and other influential citizens similarly unfortunate, and with insinuating grace he soon won their confidence. On the most bald individuals he did not want any money down, nor until they were satisfied of the truthfulness of his statements. He would leave two bottles of the "wonderful" with them, provided they would sign a contract to pay him $50 when a luxuriant growth of hair was the result of the application of the elixir. And if the contrary was he result, then they were to pay nothing. This worked fair and square and they signed. The next move, the dealer in the "wonderful" would approach other citizens equally high in standing, but less bald, showing his contracts with their more bald friends, and say to them: "I can make the hair grow on your heads as easily as on theirs, but you are not so bald. It will not take as much of the elixir, and I can do it for $5 or $10"—according to how he thought his victims would pay—"providing you will pay down. But if you want it on time, on a similar contract, I can't afford to do it for less than $50." The bait took, was swallowed, hook and all, and, after a few days' sojourn in our city, the slick one departed for other fields and pastures green with $200 or $300 ahead. He is still reaping rich harvtess elsewhere, as his little game is with persons who, after they discover they have been taken in, do not say anything about it, but endeavor to keep the matter to themselves.

Congressional Humorists.

Washington Letter to New York World.

Mr. S. S. Cox by his work on the apportionment bill last winter won high praise, and succeeded in convincing the public of the fact, which it is always loath to believe, that a humorist can be a hard and able worker as well.

Another member of the House who possesses wit and wisdom is John Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, nephew of John Randolph, of Roanoke. He has always had the reputation in Virginia of being an inimitable raconteur, but he judiciously hid his light under a bushel for a time after coming to Washington. He had been preceded by a great reputation as the ablest constitutional lawyer of his State, and at once took rank with the first intellects in the House of Representatives. But one night, at a dinner party, Mr. Tucker "let himself out" and awoke the next morning to find himself famous. Mr. Tucker is wisely witty, he is not funny with all persons at all times, and he comes down like an avalanche on the man who presumes to be familiar with the wit because he is familiar with the witticism.

John Goode, of Virginia also, until lately a member, had a vein of solemn humor and was said to be one of the few men who could make the present Senator from Michigan, O. D. Conger, realize that the floor of Congress was not a circus ring. Mr. Goode is a rock of common sense, and he had a way of calling the attention of the House to the business of the day that was utterly ruinous to Mr. Conger's amateur minstrel performance.

Sarah Bernhardt's Ghastly Bargain.

From the London World, February 22.

A queer lawsuit is in store for the Parisians. Some two years ago Sarah Bernhardt, the "grrrande artiste" and universal genius, took it into her head to be photographed reclining at full length in the famous ebony coffin, padded with white satin, about which we have heard so much. The photographer, Melandri, undertook to satisfy the lady's caprice, and obtained some excellent proofs, Sarah having simulated to perfection the stillness of death. Thereupon, Dona Sol said to Melandri, "I will make a bargain with you. Swear to me that you will not sell any of these photographs until after my death." "After your death?" * * * "Oh, it will happen sooner than you expect. I promise you to die within a year from now. I am not joking. I have a presentiment, and my presentiments never deceive me. Furthermore, at the end of the year, if I am still in this world, I authorize you to sell as many of the photographs as you please. Melandri consented to this strange contract and executed faithfully his part of the bargain; but Sarah, happily for her admirers, neglected to keep her promise. Melandri wrote to Sarah while she was at New York, reminding her that she had no longer a right to behold the light of the sun. "Patience," telegraphed Sarah; "at end of American engagement will fulfil engagement with you." Melandri waited; but when Sarah returned from Russia a few days ago he again reminded Dona Sol that she had no right to behold the light of the sun. "Patience," wrote Sarah once more; "I have promised to create three new pieces at Paris; after that you can sell the photographs." But Melandri's stock of patience is exhausted and he has consequently referred his case to the Tribunal of Commerce of Paris.

VESUVIUS VISITED.

The Railway Up the Mountain—A Rough Scramble.

From Tinsley's Magazine.

After somewhat more than half an hour's ride over a howling wilderness, we reached the foot of the cone, and the lower station of the Ferrovia Funicalore di Vesovo, or Vesuvian Rope Railway. We dismounted here, leaving our horses in charge of the custodian of what seemed to be a wooden annex to the modern whitewashed railway station; and passing over in silence a suggestion from a hairy ragamuffin that he should drag me up the cone with his strap for the small sum of six francs, I began to ascent forthwith. It was a weary climb enough from the lower to the upper station of the railway, but fortunately, not a long one, the ascent of somewhat more than a thousand feet being accomplished in about an hour's time.

The superiority of the Superior Station of the Funicular Railway lies wholly in its elevation above sea level. The edifice is nothing more than a wooden shanty—a mere tabernacle run up in a style sufficiently enduring to last until the next eruption has brushed the Funicular Railroad off the face of the mountain. The railroad itself is of very peculiar construction. The line is a double one; but the carriages, of which there are two—one ascending while the other descends—run each on a single rail raised above a foot from the bed of the road on a massive sleeper. The vehicle is steadied by a series of guide wheels, which, mounted on peculiar curved arms projecting horizontally from the lower part of the frame-work, press firmly against small secondary rails fixed to the sides of the sleeper. An endless wire rope working over large pulleys at the upper and lower stations is fixed to each carriage; and, the rope being set in motion by a stationary engine below, one carriage mounts while the other descends the steep gradient of more than thirty degrees. "Carpe diem" is naturally the maxim of the Vesuvius Railway Company. "Let us cut down expenses to the lowest figure, and squeeze as much money as we can to-day from tourists and students of nature, for to-morrow the mountain may be on the rampage." Such language as this, no doubt, is held by the chairman of the company, when a shareholder ventures to suggest a more liberal expenditure on permanent way or a reduction of the exorbitant fares.

Five minutes from the upper station, along a rugged path, flanked by walls of rough scoriæ, and the top of the mountain, hidden until now by the slope of the cone, came suddenly into view, a dense cloud of white smoke issuing from the crater, accompanied by intermittent discharges of black ashes and cinders. A few paces more, and, passing over a low brow at the summit of the great cone, we find ourselves in front of a small hut of roughly-thrown-together lava blocks.

The character of the prospect, looking from this hut toward the smoking crater, might be best summed up in the one word "infernal." A small plateau or shallow basin, less than fifty yards in width, lay before us, covered with a rough crest of sulphur, whose brilliant tints of yellow and orange and green were beautiful with a reptilian beauty. Imagine a huge frog skin stretched over a rough surface some fifty yards wide, and you have an almost perfect picture of this little basin. At its farther edge rose the final cone of Vesuvius, a steep mound of black clinkers, some fifty feet high, like the cinder heaps around a great ironworks. From its mouth rose a thick column of light-colored smoke, and at intervals of a few seconds a deep soft roar was heard like the rushing of distant waters, and a gush of ashes and dark cinder lumps shot up some hundreds of feet into the air, with a speed gradually decreasing till they reached their culminating point, where they hovered for a moment before they went swooping downward into the crater once more.

After a little while we went across this little plateau for the final cone. It was a strange sensation to feel the treacherous floor of reeking sulphur crunch beneath one's feet in the deep silence of the mountain top—a silence broken only at regular intervals by the roar of each discharge from the crater and the rustling of the lighter cinders as, carried by the wind, they fell on the outer circle of the cone. Walking over the furrowed and fissured field of crisp sulphur here called up in the memory recollections of tramps across Swiss glaciers at daybreak, before the frost crystals have begun to melt beneath the sun, but the crunch of the footfalls was perhaps the only link connecting the actual picture with the one stirred up in the memory.

The last ten minutes' work up in the steep slope of loose clinkers was more fatiguing than all that had gone before. The sulphur fumes curling up from every crevice between the cinders grew stronger as we went on, taking away our breath, and causing us to halt and cough spasmodically every half dozen steps we made. Added to the reek of the sulphur was the unpleasant heat of the ground beneath our feet, enough to scorch the soles of our boots, and to become absolutely painful when one happened to sink to his ankles in the cinders. Measured with a protractor on the sharp profile of an excellent photograph bought in Naples the following day, I found the angle of inclination here was fully thirty-four degrees, a slope only a few degrees less than that which Humboldt, in his account of the Peak of Teneriffe, points out as being quite impracticable on firm, smooth ground without the cutting of steps. But our feet, bedding themselves in the shifting clinkers, which slid under our weight with a metallic tinkle, cut their own steps as we hurried up, making a spurt to get over the business quickly and emerge into the pure air once more. We could not get right up to the brink of the crater. The stifling smoke was too much for us. Curling over the edge, it crept some feet along the slopes and held us there at bay; but even if we had been able to hang over the treacherous crumbling rim, there could have been nothing to see in the cavity of the crater itself but more smoke. So we stood gasping about six feet below the brink, admiring the grand discharges of flaming red cinders popping up some hundreds of feet into the air and falling back again softly as Roman candles. Now and then a large lump of cinder would tumble back over the edge and roll to our feet, or shoot out beyond us, and set us dodging here and there, or absurdly ducking our heads and shrugging our shoulders, as if that could have made the blow lighter when it came.

Some time afterward we turned our backs on the crater and retired in rather disorderly fashion, coughing and sliding and stumbling down the scorching hot cinder cone until we reached the lava rampart which bounds the small sulphur plateau on the right. Here, breathing freely once more, we sat down and enjoyed the spacious prospect of land and sea beneath us, or perhaps I should say I, and not we, enjoyed it, since Mr. Ruskin will not hear of an uncultivated peasantry having an eye for the beautiful in landscape.

All for Fashion.

From the New York Times.

The death, scarcely noticed, occurred in England lately of a lady who was in her day the nine days' talk of London, and indeed of the country at large. A former Marquis of Londonderry married secondly, late in life, a great heiress of despotic desposition, who became a prominent leader in the fashionable world of London, and dispensed magnificent hospitality—albeit her husband became so deeply involved that her splendid mansion, Holdernesse House, was notoriously the scene of the Sheriff's officers being present in livery at a grand entertainment. Her eldest daughter married a duke, another married an earl, and the third, lady Adelaide, was doubtless destined by her mother to form an equally desirable match from a managing mamma's point of view, but Lady Londonderry counted without her daughter. One day fashionable London was electrified by the news that Lady Adelaide Vane had disappeared, and that her brother's tutor, Mr. Law, was missing. This was not long after the [illegible] ment of the famous Lady Jersey's daughter with a Captain of Dragoons, son of a lawyer, had brought consternation on "society," the union of this pair at Gretna Green being the last of any note welded by the famous blacksmith. The story went that at the time Lady Londonderry, a rival grande dame, was the first to condole with "poor, dear Lady Jersey," and that en revanche Lady Jersey lost no time in returning the compliment when the dreadful catastrophe at Holdernesse House became known. It may be added that both of these marriages turned out quite as well as those more formally made. Capt. Ibbetson had a very respectable career in the army, and Mr. Law became an estimable clergyman, so that it was a case in both instances of "all's well that end's well." It was perfectly understood that if these ladies had not helped themselves to husbands they would have had no chance whatever of those of their own choosing, unless they had entirely fallen in with the views of mamma.

Its Work in Strathroy.

It often happens that the opinion of an experienced man, an expert, if we so call him, conveys greater force than an aggregation of outside, uneducated testimony. And then, too, personal experience or observation is so much more convincing than mere assertion. Trained to habits of analysis and keenest accuracy, and, from the very nature of their daily occupation, given to the most incisive criticism of anything of a proprietary nature, chemists, as a class, hesitate very long before indorsing anything of a remedial nature whose virtues have been announced through the public press. St. Jacobs Oil, however, is so universally successful and so unvaryingly accomplishes all that it promises that the able chemist, W. J. Dyas, Esq., of Medical Hall, Strathroy, Ont., sends, with his friendly recommendation, the following from David Harrison, Esq., 9th Conc., township of Caradoc: "Having suffered with inflammatory rheumatism since last July, and hearing of St. Jacobs Oil, I sent for a bottle of the article on the 15th of October. At that time I was confined to the house, and could not possibly get out of bed without assistance. After four applications of the oil the pain ceased entirely, and I was able to go about Strathroy in less than a week. I cannot give too much praise to St. Jacobs Oil for what it has done for me, and I believe it to be a most reliable remedy in rheumatism. Its wonderful efficacy should be brought to the knowledge of everybody."

All business or news letters or telegrams should be addressed:
POST-DISPATCH,
515 and 517 Market street.

MR. CONKLING'S letter of declination should be published for the enlightenment of the little politicians who never refuse anything.

PERHAPS Gen. GRANT would accept the Associate Justiceship. He isn't much of a lawyer, but he would make a personal sacrifice at any time to keep a big public office from going begging.

IF JAY GOULD captures the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, perhaps he will stop the unjust discrimination against St. Louis in the matter of Southeastern freights. It is understood that JAY is devoted to our town.

THE two leading jewelry houses of this city have become involved in hostilities which recall the good old days of the railroad wars. As soon as an oil painting of WASHINGTON crossing the Delaware is given away with each spoon sold we propose to make our purchases.

MR. MERRELL, the City Treasurer, may try to keep the records of his office profoundly secret, but the tax-payers are on the trail of the barnacles all the same. They propose to know what they are paying for the luxury of a Municipal Government which neither keeps the streets clean, paves them or provides sufficient protection in any quarter.

GOV. CRITTENDEN, who is pushing the scheme to call the Legislature together and gerrymander the State in the interest of the Democratic party, is keeping a tally of the sentiments of the State press on the question. He has a balance of about six weekly papers on his side at this writing. The POST-DISPATCH, we are proud to observe, heads the opposition column.

A LITTLE band of ancient Greenback priests will assemble in solemn conclave in this city to-day. The sacred coal of rag-moneyism, now almost extinct, will be placed upon the altar and vigorously blown, but it is doubtful whether even a feeble flame will be produced. The officiating gentlemen are, however, very much encouraged by the reports of floods and human distress along the Lower Mississippi.

THE city legislators have heard the voice of the people clamoring for the removal of the municipal barnacles. In the City Council last night an ordinance providing for the abolition of the office of Park Commissioner was ordered to be engrossed. The ordinance proposes to transfer Mr. WEIGEL'S duties to the President of the Board of Public Improvements, thereby saving the city $4,800 per year. A little doubling-up of this kind is what [illegible] demand now. Retrench[illegible] mot d'ordre.

IT is seldom that a genui[illegible]ly public-spirited man like Mr. MERRILL, of G[illegible]innett, Georgia, is encountered in this vale of [illegible]rs. He hung himself last week after publicly acknowledging that he was responsible for the bad weather and short crops in his section of the country. If this sort of thing should become epidemic, and our tax-dodgers, who are responsible for our bad streets, would remove themselves in about a hundred and twenty thousand fits of remorse, coffins would become a speculative security.

THE "Apostle Paul," a well-known "crank," rose in the Senate gallery yesterday and created a marke[illegible] sensation by applauding the dreary DAW[illegible]s, who was at the time in the throes of a speech on the Chinese question. It was the first time that DAWES was ever greeted by the clapping of hands in his life, and his first impulse was to dodge under a desk to avoid what he supposed to be the falling of the roof tiles. The insanity of the "Apostle Paul" being clearly established by this act, he will probably be sent to an asylum without the expense of an inquest.

THE Rev. GEORGE PEAKE, of the Leavitt Street Congregational Church, Chicago, is in trouble with his pew-renters because he has been in the habit of referring occasionally to his deacons as thieves, liars, swindlers and cut-throats in business. It is customary for people throughout the country who have been dealing in "futures" to refer to the average Chicago business man in terms of this character without regard to his religious predilections, but it is not good taste for a clerical broker and dealer in futures to thus characterize his customers. We are compelled to frown upon the Rev. Mr. PEAKE.

LAST summer, just after the shooting of President GARFIELD, suggestions of every kind rolled into the White House. Delicacies were forwarded by the car-load. Nearly everybody had something to offer to hasten the recovery of the wounded Chief. If the President had lived these philanthropists would have expected official favors. As he died they are now besieging Congress with claims. At the head of the gang of cormorants is one JENNINGS, a refrigerator man who advertised his cooling apparatus for weeks at the White House. He wants $5,000. The disreputable gang ought to be dispersed by the Capitol police.

THE State of South Carolina has been working up a subscription for a monument to HENRY TIMROD, the poet of the South. After three months' collecting, forty-seven dollars was found to be the total amount of appreciation entertained in his native land for a man whom LONGFELLOW rated as one of the foremost American poets. Probably, however, the people along the South Atlantic Coast are not aware that there is other material for headboards than pine slabs. Forty-seven dollars' worth of puncheons would make an elegant frame sarcophagus over the resting-place of a man whom South Carolina delights to honor.

THE Cairo Short Line now ends at Eldorado, Ill., a short distance from Shawneetown. At Shawneetown the Ohio River has a rock bottom. A bridge at that point could easily be built. If that road could be built via Shawneetown, through Princeton, Ky., to Nashville, some fifty to seventy-five miles would be saved over the route via Evansville. How long will the St. Louis merchants refrain from helping themselves when they can have the Cairo Short Line extended and thereby save the trade of the Southeast?

THE Rev. GASTON DE ROHAN has gone meekly and tearfully to the Missouri Penitentiary, declaring mildly that he does not understand how he could have been so wicked as to escape from that model institution. He fervently states that he will never do it again, and that it is his conscience much more than the rigors of the law which troubles him. This gaudy swindler is a cosmopolitan jail-bird. He has been in confinement in every quarter of the world, and he could give a valuable course of lectures on prison discipline illustrated by his personal experience in France, Spain, Holland, England, Germany, Mexico, Canada and the United States. He is, in short, a thief to be proud of, and St. Louis in a measure owns him.

MR. PENDLETON was not in the Senate chamber when the vote was taken on the confirmation of Mr. CONKLING, but he has intimated that his voice would have been against him. Yet it is remembered over in Ohio that Mr. PENDLETON voted to confirm STANLEY MATTHEWS, one of the chief manipulators of the thieving scheme that made Mr. HAYES President in 1876. Referring to the matter the Cleveland Plaindealer says: "Mr. CONKLING was manly in his opposition to the Democracy in 1876, but STANLEY MATTHEWS went South as a 'visiting statesman,' was one of the projectors of the many frauds perpetrated and one of their most earnest defenders before the Electoral Commission and has been credited as being the master of the notorious JOE BRADLEY." Mr. PENDLETON'S devotion to MATTHEWS will cause him some embarrassment the next time he sticks his nose into a National Democratic convention.

THE journeymen painters of the city are striving for an advance of wages and are endeavoring to enforce their demands by the ancient method known as a "strike." We know nothing of the controversy beyond the statement of the men that they are unable to support themselves and their families on the wages at present paid. Some of the employers, who decline to accede to the demands of the strikers, have appealed to the police authorities for details of patrolmen to protect their non-striking workmen. The "strikers" are indignant about this. They claim that they have not attempted to intimidate their brother workmen and that they have at no time resorted to violence. They disclaim any intention of the kind. It is to be hoped they will adhere to their platform of moral suasion, for in no other way can they win the sympathy and respect of the public. The right of workingmen to organize for protection and the maintenance of just rates of wages is conceded by every fair-minded citizen, but when force and threats are invoked to compel employers to accede to demands, and when violence is used against men who are willing to work, the spirit of the mob is disclosed, and society, for its own protection, is compelled to oppose. If the painters of St. Louis have a good cause let them appeal in a quiet, manly way to the sense of justice, which must abide with all employers, and to the intelligence which rights wrongs in all well-ordered communities.

IT is the proud boast of the Ohio town of Oberlin that it was founded upon a moral principle built of ideas and governed by the consciousness of rectitude. During the war and before, it was a hot-bed, a forcing-house of Abolition. It was here that the first colored school was started; it was here that the great underground railway from Dixie's Land had its Northern terminus. It was here that many of the thoughts were forged and welded which were subsequently hurled against armed treason, although it must be admitted that the draft was very unpopular in Oberlin and the town did a good deal more thinking than shooting at Secession. With such a record and among such a people it does not require a nimble fancy to picture the feeling of the community when it was whispered quite recently that a wicked and defiant druggist was selling whisky to the backsliding brethren of the town. Nineteen-twentieths of the people of Oberlin have sworn off, and they mean to see to it that the other twentieth will have to work for the soothing cocktail before assimilating it. Videttes were posted in the drug store, and moral influences brought to bear on Mr. BRONSON, the druggist. When a man came in and handed over a prescription calling for two fluid ounces of Bourbon whiskey he had to quail before the outraged eyes of two Oberlin scouts as he drank the medicine. Naturally Mr. BRONSON'S sales fell off and he removed the chairs which the scouts were in the habit of using, making them stand up while on duty. This maneuver was met by a supply of camp-stools sent in by the friends of temperance. Mr. BRONSON then threw the sentinels out of his store and kicked the camp-stools off the premises. The Mayor at once took a hand and swore in thirty prominent citizens as deputy marshals, one of whom is always on deck at the druggist's, armed with a club, to allay any disturbance which may arise. In the meantime, BRONSON is suing the prominent citizens for heavy damages, and the standard of intemperance still floats over this stronghold of sin. The leaguer of virtue is being brought more and more closely around it, however, and in all probability BRONSON will eventually be laid out.

THE honey bee and whisky are the pioneers of civilization in America and Australia. They are both to be found a little in advance of the white frontier in both countries. Hitherto the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico and Arizona have been peaceable and industrious, minding their own business thoroughly and occasionally giving the Apaches a severe drubbing by way of illustrating the moral of minding one's own business. They are a peculiar people, related to the civilized tribes of New Mexico rather than to the savages of the plains, and they have furnished ethnologists with many a key to the problem of American archæology. Alcohol has at last got into the Pueblos, however, and they are now involved in war with the New Mexican whites, a fight beginning with a drunken brawl leading up to a pitched battle in which the Caucasian element was routed with heavy loss. The Pueblos will, of course, share the fate of the other Indians, but it is a pity that these happy and peaceful communities must be broken up. They did no harm to any one before the white traders poisoned them with whisky; they are self-supporting, in a measure civilized, and they have a history and a well-defined religion. Unfortunately for them they are a vicarious sacrifice for our wrong-doing.

A CARD.

From the E. Jaccard Jewelry Company.

We know that the public, as a rule, take but little interest in matters which may seem merely to involve questions of rivalry in trade, but where it appears that the public is to be benefited the interest is increased. A house in this city bearing a similar name to our own in its great anxiety to secure business has seen fit to pursue methods which are at variance with our ideas of a proper regard either for the amenities of trade or of questions of fact. In view of statements which had been made by this firm that no house in America was selling goods as cheap as they, our company decided to meet all such general statements by specific ones. We therefore advertised our price as manufacturers of sterling silverware, on spoons and forks, to be $1 50 per ounce by actual weight. This produced the result we expected by calling from that firm a reply, in which the following appeared: "We offer to-day and until further notice, pure solid sterling silver spoons and forks at $1 35 per ounce, engraving included, and will be weighed before the purchaser," and the following statement was also made: "That the ware offered was less than the importer's cost of production, etc." We then prepared another advertisement (the one appearing this morning) which was taken to the office of the Republican at 9 o'clock last evening, in which we reduced our price to $1 25 per ounce. At 11 o'clock we obtained a proof of the advertisement and took it to the Globe-Democrat at 11:30. A member of the firm alluded to was there at that hour, having been duly informed by a man sent there by him of our movements, and, as we learn from one of the managers of the Globe, he was denied by him access, and very properly of course, to our matters. Nevertheless he succeeded, either through the office of the Globe or of the Republican, by means which we would regard as unworthy, in obtaining a knowledge of our affairs, and although he had ordered his own advertisement for the papers, he had the change made from $1 35 down to $1 20 per ounce. This will account for the fact that we are made to appear in to-day's paper as a higher-priced house than the one who pursues such questionable methods. We have succeeded in our purpose of uncovering this claim, and now we intend to disclose the hollowness of others.

Very respectfully,
E. JACCARD JEWELRY CO.,

A Greenbacker's Conundrum.

ST. LOUIS, March 7, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My attention was called this evening to my lonesome condition in St. Louis—"as lonesome (you say) as a tarantula in the heart of the Libyan desert." Very significant. And if you had said that I was "as lonesome as St. Paul when he visited Ephesus" your illustration of my lonesomeness would have been sufficient to "point a moral or adorn a tale." In order to enable the sapient editor of the POST-DISPATCH to do so I propose the following conundrum: Is there a sane man in the United States, if he possessed the power of making and issuing money for the transaction of his business and the payment of all his debts, that would execute a bond bearing interest for his debts, or execute his note, with or without interest, payable in another money? Should you answer that no man would be such a fool, then please inform your readers why the representatives of the Republican and Democratic parties, possessing the unquestionable right of making and issuing money for the payment of all debts public and private, in their management of the people's business, have issued bonds bearing interest and have issued notes payable in some other money? Are they lunatics or what?

If the editor of the POST-DISPATCH will answer this conundrum, I will bless the day I visited St. Louis.

A Street Car Imposition.

ST. LOUIS, March 7, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"Put your fare in the box on entering the car."

This is the placard stuck up in the cars of the Gravois road, as a rule, I suppose, to be complied with by the passengers. I got on at the western terminus, and did as requested, but on getting to the car stables the car standing went out ahead, and when I inquired about changing cars and told the driver that I had put my fare in the box, I was told I would have to ride on that car or pay another fare. I drew his attention to the rule, and he replied that it was not right, but that he or they could not help it, which, of course, I acknowledged. I did not mind waiting for the next car, which I thought would be the one I was in, but instead of it they run two cars out of the stable, switched the car behind the one I was in ahead, and started for town according to time. Now if they want people to comply with their rules, why not transfer them in a case of that kind, or put up a notice not to put your fare in the box until you arrive at the stables, and not keep people waiting for three cars to start out ahead of the one that was waiting. There was a time when the Fifth street line would transfer passengers in the car waiting at the stable in the South End going to the "Wild Hunter's." Now, I ask, is this justice when a man does right?

[The law requires that the license shall be obtained from the Recorder's office. It is not strictly necessary that "both" parties shall appear before the Recorder. The acknowledgment of a notary as to the age qualification of "the lady" is sufficient. The law simply requires that applicants shall be of age, males twenty-one, females eighteen. The consent of parents or guardians for persons under age would be required. The license reads that such and such parties are above the limit of age prescribed by the law. THE BROADWAY BANK.

Another Chapter in the History of the Broken Banks.

$300,000 of the Depositors' Money Sunk in This Institution.

The Story of Bank Management in St. Louis.

A Tale Involving Shame, Disgrace, Suicide, Ruin and Fraud.

The collapse of the Broadway Bank in May, 1879, was attended with developments of such a remarkable character that it ranks pre-eminent among the memorial tablets of directory mismanagement of St. Louis trust funds. The past few years closed over the graves of six or seven rotten institutions sailing under the ironical title of saving banks. The doors of the Central had not long been shut when the Butchers' and Drovers' suspended; but it was thought that with the latter the list of failures in banking business here had closed. Confidence in the Broadway establishment was so firmly fixed that the School Board appointed its cashier treasurer and the school funds were deposited in its vaults. Late into one night of the spring of 1879, however, the directors sat discussing a situation negligence and mismanagement had mainly brought about, and it was resolved to meet the depositors and the public the following day with the announcement of an assignment for the benefit of creditors to John Dierberger. Broadway was in a state of ferment as soon as the morning papers met the gaze of the duped depositors. The doors of the bank were surrounded and the usual stories of fraud and swindling were passed from lip to lip, supplemented with anathemas hurled at the directors and the cashier. The bank had been established in 1869 by J. Phil Krieger, Sr., an old German citizen, who ran a saloon on Fifth street. The capital stock was placed at $300,000, but it was reduced to $150,000 under operation of the law of 1877. It did a fair business among the commission merchants and the horse and mule traders along Broadway. When the crash came it was officered as follows: President, J. P. Krieger, Sr.; Vice-President, H. B. Poorman; Cashier, J. Phil Krieger, Jr.; Directors: L. S. Bargen, John F. Hackmann, H. Houghton, J. Johnson, Jas. Lightholder, Geo. Lang, Morris Lyons, John Rohan, August Rode, Frederick Zelle and Hy. Obermoeller. The POST-DISPATCH had occasion a few days since to illustrate the composite character of an average directory managing financial trusts.

WHICH THEIR OWN IGNORANCE,

THE CRAZE OF MEN

of small mental caliber to assume positions of this character has been gratified in St. Louis at the cost of the hard earnings of thousands of frugal people. Legislation has attempted to fasten some measure of responsibility upon bank directors of late years, but no method has yet been adopted to prevent men who know nothing about financial business from stepping into the chairs which invite the confidence and the money of the struggling trader and artisan.

The Broadway directors declined to divulge for many days any details of the bank's condition. Rumors were flying thick and fast implicating all the officers of the institution, but many weeks elapsed ere the solid facts were reached, together with the causes leading directly to the failure. The earliest statement prior to the official report to court was to the effect that the deposits had fallen off to the extent of $130,000 in one month. After a time the following statement was rendered:

ASSETS.

Exchange	$228,815 83
Bills receivable	384,412 19
Real estate	15,655 13
Real estate loans	74,415 82
Due from banks	33,174 25
Cash	52,933 52
Total	$794,513 74

LIABILITIES.

Demand deposits	$308,551.74
Time deposits	222,128.05
Due banks	27,891.59
Balance	235,942.36
Total,	$794,513.74

After the directors had relieved themselves by shifting the blame and responsibility for the failure from the shoulders of one to the other, the facts were brought out, and the transactions of the cashier with Meyer Goldsoll, involving loans without security to the extent of hundreds of thousands, were exposed to light. Young Krieger had suffered himself to a certain degree to be made a scapegoat for the loose transactions to which certain of the directors were parties in full and guilty knowledge. But he played fast and loose himself with the bank's affairs, and his infatuation for an extravagant young woman led him into the wildest excesses and diverted his attention from business. The current of popular indignation was strong against him, and to escape personal injury he took refuge behind the bars of the City Jail. Shame and disgrace, added to bitter remorse, brought him at length to the grave of a suicide. It would be tedious to dwell at length upon the transactions sanctioned by this model directory, which led the institution to ruin. The course of the cashier, suicidal as it was, could have been stopped, and the loose dealings on the part of the bank checked by a vigilant, conscientious corps of managers. The Broadway went under because she was in the hands of a dishonest person and because her officers were recalcitrant to their trust.

THE HISTORY OF THIS BANK'S

liquidation may be told in a few words. In May, 1879, John Dierberger, as assignee under the deed executed by the bank directors, took hold of the concern. The indignant creditors at once moved for his removal. Two petitions were presented to court urging the appointment of Philip Stock, ex-Clerk of the Circuit Court. Mr. Dierberger found things too warm for him up at the "busted" bank and he gracefully tendered his resignation. Stock was ordered to give bond in the sum of $500,000. A few days later he came into court and asked leave to withdraw. J. M. Franciscus was then appointed assignee by Judge Boyle, and John F. Grady and John H. Dieckmann were appointed appraisers. On the 30th of June, 1879, after a few weeks' experience, Mr. Franciscus came into court and resigned. The following day John R. Lionberger, of the Third National Bank, was appointed assignee, and he chose to remain, giving bond in the sum of $650,000. In doing this Brother Lionberger was enabled to effect a little arrangement for his son-in-law John D. Davis, the attorney. The wreck has since been carefully guarded by the assignee and his son-in-law, backed by the moral and legal support of Judge Geo. A. Madill, ex-president of the ex-Democratic Association.

THESE GENTLEMEN

have been content to receive for their services, allowed from the assignee's expense account, $3,125 jointly. The son-in-law of the assignee for his own services, independent of other attorneys, has accepted $2,829 35, and $15 per month for office rent. Messrs. Withrow & Davis for legal services have received $397 01. F. E. Miltenberger, as an accountant, has received about $25 per month, and W. K. Spinney, $100 for special work. Assignee Lionberger himself has had $7,500 allowed on account of his services by order of court. James M. Franciscus was allowed $1,821 90 on account of his expenses and $500 for his services, which only lasted a few days, and John Dierberger was allowed $708 for his services. In dividends the assignee has paid out $257,285.36 as against $558,500 liabilities. The first dividend was 25 per cent, and $149,157 05 passed to the creditors at that ratio. Litigation has been pushed against both directors and stockholders on their liability established by law, and in every case where a judgment could be recovered the [illegible]ollars have been gathered in. The assignee [illegible] rendered thirteen reports to court, the last of date February just closed, showing a balance on hand of $29,132 82. The first report extended from May to October, 1879, and the synopsis is as follows:

The disbursements from December, 1879, to date have amounted to $188,663 03, including payment of dividends Nos. 2 and 3. The assignee expects to pay another dividend of ten per cent, after which the final ceremonies will be performed over the Broadway corpse and the case in court closed.

The property of the bank was appraised by John H. Dieckmann and John F. Grady, and their appraisement was filed in June, 1879, showing the total valuation of $315,606 60. Of this sum about $45,000 was used by the depositors as offset against their indebtedness to the bank, leaving the actual assets $270,606 60. Mr. Lionberger, as assignee, has filed thirteen reports, showing a payment to the creditors of three dividends, the first of 25 per cent, the second 8 and the third 10, making a total of 43 per cent, on claims of about $625,000, making the total amount paid in dividends $267,353 28. The following abstract of receipts and disbursements has been furnished by the accountant:

Total cash receipts	$321,732 25

Balance, cash on hand	29,132 82
Total	$321,732 25

These accounts furnish a reflection on bank management in St. Louis. The Broadway crash carried with it a clear loss of $300,000 to the depositors.

CAUGHT IN A COLLISION.

Cost of a Spinal Column Charged up Against a Railroad.

A special jury is in attendance to-day before Judge Adams, summoned for the trial of the $10,000 damage suit Eliza T. Shepard against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. The lady was a passenger on the west-bound train to Kansas City November 25, 1880. A short distance from Pleasant Hill there was anything but a pleasant experience for the passengers. The company's servants were endeavoring to solve a problem that never has been solved yet, viz.: How two trains moving in opposite directions can pass each other on the same track. The effort was not a success on this occasion, and a collision ensued which scattered the passengers right and left. Mrs. Shepard, a lady of heavy proportions, was seriously hurt, and she alleges that the accident resulted in permanent injury to the lower portion of the spinal column, dislocating the coccyx. The sufferer alleges that her nervous system has been entirely unstrung and her health generally materially affected by the collision. The company moved before trial that Mrs. Shepard submit herself to a thorough medical examination; to which she demurred, alleging that the ordeal would be painful and cause aggravated sickness. Her attorney, Mr. L. Wilcox, poured a flood of depositions into court, and the company to-day will place an army of medical experts on the stand. The lady will undergo a private examination in course of trial if the court should so order. Mr. Andrews represents the Missouri Pacific, and the jury may expect to learn something about medical science and the nervous system before night closes in.

Fine Art Book Sale.

Catalogues of the sale of Fine Art Books are now ready and can be had of Mr. Shaw at the store, 210 N. Fifth street, or of Hagerty & Dewes, auctioneers. The books will be on view on Thursday and will be sold on Friday and Saturday.

GOV. CRITTENDEN.

The Sale of Hannibal and St. Joe—Extra Session of the Legislature.

Gov. Crittenden was found this morning at the Southern, engaged in consultation over the raising of funds for the sufferers of South-eastern Missouri by the recent floods. A reporter of the POST-DISPATCH inquired:

"Governor, what will you do in connection with the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad matter?"

"I am preparing to advertise the road for sale."

"What will you make the date of the sale?"

"I have not exactly decided, but it will be about six months from now."

"Has the road shown a disposition to compromise?"

"Neither to compromise nor to pay. In fact they seem to have entirely ignored the decision of the court and are proceeding as though nothing was expected of them."

"Have you determined whether you will call a special session of the Legislature?"

"No; I am waiting for some public indication. If a majority of the party appear to demand it, I shall proceed to call the Legislature. But I must have an undoubted expression of opinion. It will not do to convene the Legislature on a mere whim."

The Governor was interrupted here and taken down to the Merchants' Exchange.

Belligerent Blacksmiths.

The blacksmithing firm of John D. Haug and Alfonso Fischer, 2207 O'Fallon street, are at loggerheads. This morning Ed L. Gottschalk appeared before Judge Boyle, seeking in behalf of Mr. Haug an order for the winding up of the partnership, an injunction against Fischer, and the appointment of a receiver. All the preliminaries to effect a dissolution and settlement were arranged and an injunction bond fixed by the court. The business was not of gigantic dimensions.

Hotel Closed.

The Park Hotel, at Twelfth and Olive streets, closed up this morning, and the regular boarders found places elsewhere. Mr. James O. Ives, the manager, is again out of business, but says he will soon have a re-engagement. The hotel failed for want of patronage.

THE second grand musical soiree of the Beethoven Conservatory of Music will be given at Memorial Hall, corner of Nineteenth and Locust streets, to-morrow evening, under the direction of Prof. A. Waldauer. The published programme indicates that the entertainment will be of the highest order of merit.

DR. A. A. HENSKE said to a reporter to-day that at the St. Anne's Lying-in Hospital the patients were mainly charitable ones from the country, and only $10 a week was charged for board.

ON THE RIALTO.

An Opinion Upon the February Wheat Deal.

Thompson's Correspondents---The Mutual Union---Odds and Ends.

The publication in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH of the Billingsley & Nanson petition, asking for a settlement of the February wheat deal and the decision of the Call Board Committee in the matter brought that "cornered corner" once more prominently before the members, and this morning there was considerable discussion of the case. The general opinion appeared to be that the middle men had no recourse whatever for damages, and they must stand any loss they may have incurred by settling with their customers and paying them the profits before the deal was fully settled up. The facts as summed up by a prominent operator are as follows: "The middle men had the wheat sold at a high price and bought 3@5c lower. The parties from whom they had it bought did not deliver them the wheat; consequently they could not deliver any to the parties to whom they had it sold, and as the latter made no demand on the middle men for the wheat, but allowed their contracts to go by default, the middle men have no claim upon the longs. Now if a market value for the wheat could be established for the last day of the month at a price above the figures the middle men bought at, they probably could claim damages from the parties who were short to them, but as the month went out with sales at from $1 40 to $1 25, and as it would be difficult for any committee to fix the actual value of the wheat on the last day above $1 25, you can see that they cannot claim damages from the shorts. It is my opinion that the middle men must stand their loss."

INFORMATION AND MONEY WANTED.

Mr. C. L. Thompson, president of the St. Louis Board, is the recipient of more nonsensical communications than any other man in the city. People seem to think he has at his command all the information they wish, besides being the possessor of unlimited funds to help them to prosperity. Following are two letters received by Mr. T. that are samples of their kind. The first, from Ed. S. Boyce, Northboro, Ia., addressed to the President Board of Trade, St. Louis, reads: "There is a small amount of old crib lumber on the R. R. above this place, about 300 feet. If the same is for sale, what is the price? as I can find no one here that knows anything about it." The other, from Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Feb. 27, '82, P. O. Box 22: "Board of traid St Louis Jents Sirs I have Bought Buysness lots & Building on them for the Express purpose of doing Buysness for the Wabash St Louis & Pasific R. Road I want to Buy Corn small grain hogs and cattle or anything may com a long. But I want the means to do with will you help me, my lot is on the east side of the track, at north end of the switch in this city. Sirs I want lumber to build cribs and money to do with Can I have help Pleas let me know soon for I have a standing offer a few days to go over one of the other railroads. Yours etc.,

PROGRESS OF THE MUTUAL UNION.

The Mutual Union Telegraph Company is energetically pushing its lines to all important points. New offices are now open at Kansas City, Independence, Glasgow, Marshall, Mexico, Bowling Green and Louisiana, Mo., and to Indianapolis, Lafayette and Miller's in Indiana. The company have also in construction four fine new wires from New York that follow the turnpike road to Philadelphia, Wheeling, Columbus, Springfield, Mo., and Indianapolis, at latter point taking the Vandalia road, over which they have the right of way, to St. Louis. James Gamble, General Manager of the Mutual Union, has been in Kansas City for some time selecting a route to San Francisco. This route will be over the Kansas Pacific road, taking in Denver and Leadville. The line will be open to Omaha by July 1.

"ELEVATOR CORNER."

Just at the south end of the reporters' desk on 'Change is the "elevator corner," where all the elevator men congregate from 11 to 1 o'clock. It is one of the busiest spots on the floor. John Jackson, Major Slattery, the two Larimores, R. S. McCormick, Charley Isaacs, Hugh Rogers and others have always some one buttonholing them with endless inquiries as to grain they may have in the different elevators, and the patience shown by the elevator men in answering these questions is only equaled by that supposed to have been exercised by Job.

A LONDON LETTER.

A late London letter says: "The Australian wheat crop, gathered at the close of last year, is now in process of shipment. The yield is understood to be decidedly superior to the small crop of 1880, but it is not believed to be equal to that of 1879. With the existing large supplies buyers can well afford to operate cautiously and await the result of the Indian, Egyptian and Chilian harvests, the time for securing which is not so far distant. We must now expect, however, our own supplies to fall off considerably, as British farmers, out of a small crop, have been marketing their produce freely since the commencement of the season."

THE BULGE IN OATS.

Oats in this market have been run up to a high point, and St. Louis is now relatively higher than any other market in this country. The sharp advance was caused by an urgent demand from the South that came while the offerings of oats were small here. A few days ago large orders were received from Cairo, Ill., where the high water prevented grain from being received and shipped, and from many other points south the demand was unusually heavy. The effect of these high prices will, undoubtedly, be to attract oats in large quantities to this market, and as it seems probable that this demand will not keep up long, the consequence will be a large stock for which there will be no outlet.

NOTES.

Dick Lannigan has joined the Legion of Honor, and now he refuses all invitations to sit down.

A "Lady Subscriber" is informed that Mr. Ben Barnes' wheat elevator is located at Oshkosh. He is a married man.

David Dows & Co., of New York, telegraph that the visible supply of wheat for March 4 will show a reduction of a million bushels upon the preceding week.

Joe Pritchard, of the Price Current, has developed into a first-class pugilist, and thinks seriously of challenging Sullivan, if he can reduce his weight two or three hundred pounds.

This morning's Liverpool cables report spot wheat dull and no spot corn offering; wheat to arrive dull and neglected and corn to arrive rather easier. London reports Mark lane wheat and corn dull and heavy country; markets shade lower: mixed American corn to arrive 3d lower; Western winter wheat 10s 5d; No. 2 spring 10s 2d; No. 3 spring 9s 5d; mixed Western corn firmer; wheat on the continent neglected and demand moderate for corn.

THE STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.

The Constant Battle of the Laboring Classes for Bare Subsistence.

Extraordinary Dangers and Hardships of Some Work.

Diseases Contracted and Injuries Sometimes Received.

The Lead Factories, Boiler Shops and Other Establishments.

Life one Constant Fight for the Necessities to Support It.

A faithful picture of the condition of the women who work in the large factories of St. Louis hat been already given in the POST DISPATCH. The details were startling enough to that class who know nothing of the way other people manage to exist, and who are accustomed to look at life through the rosiest of glasses.

The laboring men of the city, by which is meant all those who do manual labor, are also a fit class of study for this same class of people. Political economists have commented over and over again on the fact that civilization has improved the condition of all but the working class. Telegraphy, electricity, machinery, etc., have almost annihilated space and distance. Things which could not have been imagined possible fifty years ago are done rapidly and easily now by means of late inventions, and yet the condition of the workers and the length of hours of labor have not been changed in the least. It has been repeatedly shown by statistics that four-fifths of the population of the United States are laborers. And it is also a patent truth that Nearly every one of the vast number are compelled to work ten hours a day for six days of every week, simply to live. Nor do these toilers live in the real sense of the word. They are not the people who visit the theaters. The pleasures of the table are forbidden to them, for the necessary luxuries are too high to be in reach of the workingman's purse. Pleasure trips and excursions out of town in unseasonably hot weather are so far from them that it would not be rank incredulity on their part to believe that such things do not exist. A majority of this class of people in all untries what is the outlook brightened by this step? means additional expense for rent, clothing d food, which signifies harder work debt. It means living in e top stories of tenement houses, small, crowded, badly ventilated rooms, re the danger from fire and other casualties is ever imminent. It means the bringing of children without sufficient education to e above the condition of their fathers. ese children, in a majority of cases, as nown before, are compelled by sheer necessity to go out to work while yet too young, and e forced to go to labor which is physically g, the children being thus d in body and in mind. d finally, the laborer in a jority of cases sees old age coming on him thout being able to make any provision for it, and in a large percentage of instances he quits a life where all has been work and no play for him without the surroundings to make his exit decently comfortable. That the prospect is discouraging nobody will deny, and the fact that the laboring classes are not more discontented can scarcely be explained.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter to-day made a round of several manufacturing establishments in the city, where large numbers of men are employed, in order to get an idea of the condition of things. The impressions are too vivid to be clearly reproduced. The intention, however, is not to find fault with employers. The idea is to show the struggle for life among the working classes, and to exemplify just what workmen have to do to keep body and soul together. Perhaps the most disagreeable form of employment in the city is that furnished in

THE WHITE LEAD FACTORIES.

A visit to a couple of them is sufficient to make almost any man think his condition fortunate in comparison with the employes of these places. Several white lead works are located in the city, the largest being the establishment of the Collier Company on Clark avenue. A more unhealthy avocation is not known to the medical profession, yet there are 500 men in St. Louis today who are directly connected with the white lead business as workmen. As the reporter walked through one of the factories, he noticed that all the men, especially those who were in close proximity to the vats, were pale-faced and hollow-eyed. One man who seemed to be very weak was accosted.

"You do not seem to be well?"

"No. In fact I have just returned from an attack of sickness."

"What was the nature of your sickness?"

"Oh, this terrible lead colic. This is the second attack I have had within a year. The doctor told me not to come back. He says that another attack may cause paralysis, but what can I do? I cannot get any other kind of work. I must make some money. My wife and two children are in want. This is the only place where I could get employment, so I was compelled to come back."

"Does the 'colic' you speak of cause much suffering?"

"I should say so," said the speaker, with a gesture of disgust. "Ask any of these men."

"Have they all had it?"

"Yes, most of them more than once. You know

WHAT AN EPILEPTIC FIT IS.

Well, the attack is much like that. The person who has it writhes and foams at the mouth and generally has all the horrible contortions which accompany a fit, only that in lead colic they last longer. These are followed by a sickness which sometimes lasts several weeks, and from which the sufferer gets up weak and pale, just as I am. My doctor says that another attack will produce stiffening of my joints and partial paralysis. Last time I tried to avoid the attack by drinking new milk and other things that we thought were good, but it was no use."

"What wages do you receive?"

"I am only a helper around these vats, and I get $1 75 per day. That is better than I would get for the same work in other parts of the house, where there is less danger of the colic. A man must support his family, and I am trying to do it, even if it kills me."

Other employes were spoken to, and many of them said that they had the terrible "lead colic," some of them more than twice. A middle-aged man said that he had been in the place five years, that when he first came he was hale and stout, but that now his back, knees and elbow joints were stiff, as an effect of

and he was not in fact able to do any work but the lightest. The real truth was that he was being kept and paid wages simply because he had become superannuated in the establishment.

Asked about his family, this man said: "Oh, yes, I have several children. My son, who is fourteen years of age, is working in another part of the factory. He wants to come in here, because he can get better wages, but I persuade him not to do it. He will, though, after a while. I hate to see him do so, but what can I do."

From the white lead manufactories a trip was taken through the boiler yards and foundries in the northern part of the city. Two or three of them were visited. The work in the foundries, on cold days, is not so disagreeable. In summer, however, it is almost unendurable. The heat and sparks are enough to drive a man mad, yet hundreds stand the blaze every year during the months that those whose wealth allows it flee the city, to avoid the scorching breezes which blow even in the elevated portions of the West End. The molders in stove foundries work in damp, cold and cheerless barns, and all of them complain that chronic rheumatism is sure to follow their work.

IN THE BOILER YARDS

the noise and racket was such that no talking could be done while the work is in progress. At the noon recess the reporter walked in again and found a man seated on a pile of scrap iron, taking out of his dinner bucket pieces of cold meat and bread, on which to make his noonday repast. The terrible clatter of the numerous hammers had ceased, so that conversation was possible. The man was noticed to be very deaf, and on questioning about it he said:

"Why, all boiler-makers are more or less deaf. A good many of them that I know cannot hear at all. I am not as bad as that yet, you see. You come in here and stay an hour or two, and see if you do not go away with a singing in your ears which will last you for the rest of the day. Then just think of us, who are here every day for ten long hours. It makes us all deaf. It is not as bad as other things, though."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, the men who repair the boilers, chisel out the rivets and do that style of work. They are in a more dangerous line. If you go over to the shop you will find that many of them have lost one eye. The little sparks which fly from the iron strikes the eye and destroys the sight. Some of the men try to wear masks and spectacles, but they cannot work with them. We gave a ball a couple of weeks ago for a man

WHO HAD BECOME TOTALLY BLIND.

He lost his left eye about a year ago. Before Christmas he was working away underneath a boiler, when he felt a stinging pain in his right eye, and afterwards water running out. He soon found he could not see at all. A doctor was called, and it was seen that a splinter of iron had gone clean through the pupil, letting out the fluid inside and ruining the eye. The splinter when taken out was found to be not so big as the head of a pin, but it had blinded the man for life."

These men make from $1 50 per day upward. Their work is hard and exhausting, dirty in its nature and very dangerous. Nearly all of them have families to support. It is useless to describe the condition of things at the Vulcan and other furnaces and rolling mills in Carondelet and other parts of the city. The men are roasted almost to death during four months of the year. They are subjected to all the dangers which may always arise from boilers, machinery and an abundance of molten metal. The work is the severest drudgery. The pay is not at all large. Accidents are very frequent, as any reader of the daily papers is well aware.

THE CIGAR-MAKERS AND TOBACCO WORKERS

are another class who have a hard time. Most of the shops are badly ventilated, in fact, where there are large quantities of tobacco ventilation is impossible. Consumption and catarrh are the diseases which cut down the workers who are confined all day in such a terrible atmosphere.

Yet, although the pay is very small, it is a fact that until lately many of the cigar-makers had to take their pay in cigars, which they were compelled to sell around the saloons at whatever profit they could get. They thus had a chance of being arrested for violating the revenue laws, were compelled to spend money to make the sales, thus lessening the profits, and were necessitated to find time to sell the cigars while at the same time attending to their work. The wages paid last year averaged from $1 25 to $2 per day for more than twelve hours' work. The custom of giving cigars in payment of wages has been nearly broken up by the late act of the Legislature, but still prevails to a considerable extent.

About the hardships of the bricklayers, plasterers, house carpenters and others of that class, it is needless to say anything. In fact, an examination into all classes showed that with rents at the figure they now are, and provisions away up, it was as much as any man could do, if he had steady work, to support his family in the plain necessities.

As the reporter rode home from one of the foundries on the front platform of a Fifth street car, he fell into a middle-aged man, about the vicissitudes of life. After some words were passed, the driver was asked if his work was not pretty hard.

"Well, it is," he said; "just about as hard as it could possibly be."

"What wages do you get?"

"About $1 60 per day."

"How do you live on that?"

"I'll tell you. I have a wife and six children. We live in two rooms on the third story. I work about seventeen hours Sunday and every day else. The time I am at home I am so tired that I sleep. I never have a chance to talk to my wife and children. Indeed, during the winter season I never see their faces by daylight."

"What rent do you pay?"

"Six dollars per month. So you will see just how much we have to live and clothe ourselves on. We do not get many dainties."

Here was a man who literally worked all his time—for what? To get just enough ragged clothes to cover his body, and not enough inferior food to stay his appetite. The great complaint among the laboring men is the length of hours they work. Many of them have to go to Carondelet, East St. Louis and distant parts of the city to work, so that many of them are practically doing twelve or even thirteen hours' hard labor every day.

WENDELL PHILLIPS

lectured upon the working classes in this city several years ago, and, commenting upon this subject, he spoke as follows:

"I should be far within bounds, if I said that twenty millions wake every morning, and spend their waking hours—the whole of them—in industrious and faithful toil, merely to support the body. That is no exaggeration, you will certainly allow. The man that rises between six and seven to go to a New England mill, and leaves it perhaps at seven in the evening, or reaches home at seven, and has to spend another hour in preparing for to-morrow, and the man out here on the prairies that rises in the same way—no matter how fertile your soil—it is no exaggeration to say that, taking the average of the States, one-half of our Christendom population simply exists to keep their body alive. Well, now, in the nineteenth century of Christendom, I proclaim that an infamous result. I affirm that the working masses have a right to indict the civilization that produces it. No matter what may be your theory of finance, no matter what may be your criticism of shiftlessness, indolence, lack of foresight, vice—combine them all—it never could have been supposed that in the nineteenth century the wit of man would have remained so dull and stagnant that such a statement could be truthfully made.

NOW WHY IS IT

that if the laboring class be four-fifths of society, the drunkenness of the laboring class is ninety nine one-hundredths? Why is it that the workingmen are the seed-plots? Why? Because, when a man has spent twelve hours in toil merely to sustain his body, simply for his bread. At night, as it closes in, there is no elasticity of thought, no buoyancy of physical power, no healthful wakefulness that would lead him to share an intellectual pleasure. He cannot sit down to read; he cannot amuse himself with the higher powers of his nature. Sleep or some gross physical stimulus is the only thing available to him, and he sinks into its arms as his only refuge from the painful contemplation of the dread routine of a daily life like that. No man has a right to blame him. The society that condemned him to toil in all his waking hours handed him over to his lower appetites, food for their triumph, and any man accustomed to deal with that great cancer in city life which makes demagogueism possible knows that it is only to be dealt with by lifting these large masses into the capacities of higher pleasures, more intelligent amusements and grander opportunity, leisure and its results."

GUERNSEY, JONES & CO.,

500 NORTH FOURTH STREET.

THE MODERN ELDORADO.

Mexican Railways, Mexican Mines and Other Aztec Bonanzas.

Hon. A. C. Hunt, ex-Governor of Colorado, but more recently solicitor of the Mexican National Railway, arrived from Monterey, Mexico, this morning, and registered at the Southern. He is accompanied by his private secretary, R. A. Crespi, Mrs. A. W. Wilcox, Mrs. Johns and children, and servants. In fact, the Governor's retinue is quite extensive, but he is himself as unobtrusive and unpretentious as a backwoods farmer. When a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH called this morning, Gov. Hunt was seated before a blazing fire endeavoring to take a mental inventory of his valises, baskets and handbags. The Governor said:

"We encountered considerable water along the Iron Mountain road, but we came in on time. The whole southeastern part of your State seems to be flooded."

"What is the present condition of affairs in Mexico?"

"The Government of the Republic is much stronger than the outside world imagines, and it is able and prompt in the suppression of mobs. The trouble is that every cow-boy's difficulty is heralded to the world as a new rebellion, and the country begins to think that Mexico is in a constant state of upheaval. The other day a dozen drunken bandits from the border went into Chihuahua and seized Gov. Terrazas, whom they undertook to hold for ransom, but within two days the Government had every man engaged in the affair, and Gov. Terrazas was uninjured. Yet that went abroad as a fresh rebellion. There are only two recognized classes in Mexico—the extremely rich and the extremely poor. The intervening race live by their wits—gamble, horse-race, deal in stock, steal and plunder. It is that class that the Government is just now looking after."

"Is the Mexican National progressing very rapidly?"

"No, but it is being constructed steadily and will eventually be a great railroad. It crosses the Republic from the East to West, and the Mexican Central from North to South."

"Is your present visit here connected with that road?"

"No, I resigned my position several months ago, and am now organizing the Rio Grande and Pecos Railway and Telegraph Company, which was incorporated last month by J. W. Throckmorton, Albert W. Wilcox and myself."

"What are the termini of the proposed road?"

"The principal business of the company will be established at Laredo, Webb county, Tex. It is proposed to start from the city of Brownsville, Cameron county, and proceed up the east side of the Rio Grande River, through Cameron and Hidalgo counties, to Rio Grande City, in Star county, and thence up the valley to Carrizo, Zapato county, and thence to Laredo. Then we connect Laredo with a vast coal field thirty miles distant, and develop the greatest coal mines in the world, which are now putting out over 100 tons daily of the best quality of Cannel, equal to that mined in quantity."

"Is the demand for coal extensive in that country?"

"A ready sale is found in Laredo for all this coal, which is being delivered for the use of the railways, and at Fort McIntosh at $8 per ton of 2,000 pounds. There is a large demand for coal at Point Isabel from steamships on the Gulf, which will pay on transportation at least two cents a ton per mile. The International and Great Northern Railway traverses a country which for over 300 miles is destitute of fuel and dependent solely on mesquite wood, known to be very injurious to flues and all iron that the acids come in contact with. This railway must depend upon this coal for fuel, as also for the seventy-five miles down the Mexico side of the Rio Grande. Besides, the Texas Mexican Railway, for a distance of 167 miles to Corpus Christi, and the Mexican National, for 250 miles, will also be dependent solely on these coal mines, which are owned by our company."

"Who constitute the company?"

"The board of directors consists of Alva Adams, Jerome B. Chaffee, J. W. Throckmorton, Santos Benavides, Wilson Waddingham, H. J. L. Cake, Ysidore Guzman, Santiago Lauchez and myself. The corporation will be entitled to receive from the State of Texas, upon completion of a section of ten miles or more of its road, sixteen sections of land of 640 acres each for every mile of its road so completed and put in good running order; it also has the right to construct and operate its own telegraph line along its railway tracks."

"What is the specific purpose of your visit here?"

"To contract for iron and locomotives to be used immediately on the new road. I shall remain in the city about two weeks for that purpose."

How foolish are the endeavors of parties to introduce new remedies for coughs and kindred complaints when they should know that the people will have Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and nothing else.

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Dr. Kolbenheyer's Lecture at the Germania Club.

Dr. Kolbenheyer delivered his lecture on "The Nervous System" last evening at the Germania Club to a large and fashionable audience. The lecturer, although speaking on an essentially scientific and technical subject, avoided all mere medical terms, and by his skill and learning presented the subject, dry as it may seem, in a most popular and interesting form, so that the audience listened attentively from beginning to end.

Dr. Kolbenheyer prefaced his remarks by stating that our century, and especially the present decade, was a "nervous" one; that railroads, electricity, the telegraph and other arrangements of to-day occasion such a rapid life, as it were, as to leave merely a breathing spell, and consequently caused nervous suffering. The celebrated American psychologist, Dr. Beard, denominates our present life as "a life of nerveness." It would be more correct, even if more unpleasant, to term it "nervelessness." This fact must impress upon every thinking man the importance of a correct comprehension of the nervous system. The lecturer then drew upon a blackboard a sketch of the primitive cell from which the higher develop themselves, and then proceeded to describe the cerebrum and cerebellum, or large and small brain, as well as the spinal cord. In the cranium are small openings which serve as a passage way for the brain nerves, the optic, auricular and olfactory nerves. Next Dr. Kolbenheyer alluded to the optical or sight nerves and the development of the same on the eye as the retina. He explained the construction of the retina, which not alone contains the faculty of sight, but also that of color. He also discussed the Thomas Young color theory and explained with interesting anecdotes Daltonism or color-blindness. The difference between the motor nerves, which produce muscular action, and the sensitive nerves, which are receptive, was then touched upon as well as the vasa-motor nerves, which serve the muscular stratum of the arteries.

TEMPEST IN A TEA POT.

The State Stationer at Loggerheads With the Governor and Auditor.

The State of Missouri, through its Board of Printing Commissioners, annually advertises for bids and proposals for furnishing the executive departments of the State Government with stationery. During the last ten years the contract has been continuously awarded to John J. Daly & Co., on competitive bids. The method of obtaining stationery, as prescribed by law, is by requisition on the Secretary of State, who is ex-officio chairman of the Printing Commission, and the receipt indorsed on the requisition is used as a voucher by the parties holding the contracts. After the stationery and printing contracts are awarded, the executive officers are bound by law to recognize the same and are not permitted to purchase stationery outside, unless to be paid for out of the separate contingent fund of each department, which is generally too closely limited for any such maneuvers. It is alleged that a coolness exists between Gov. Crittenden and Secretary of State McGrath, and that the Governor is not inclined to make requisition in the proper form. Thus, last week his Excellency forwarded to Gast & Co. a large order for envelopes, and another to the New York National Bank Note Company for the same, for all of which the Secretary of State cannot approve an order on the general fund for printing for the executive departments. A conspicuous violation of the stationery contract is State Auditor Walker, who has always shown a desire to purchase outside, and of the stationer he demands fresh figures upon every piece of work, notwithstanding the stationer's detailed bid is on file and duly accepted by the State. As a sample, Mr. Daly has received the following unique communication:

JEFFERSON CITY, March 2, 1882.

John J. Daly & Co., St. Louis:

GENTS—I want 10,000 envelopes within two months. The enclosed envelopes will give an idea what I want—No. 1 the size and form; No. 2 the design and work and color; No. 3 the kind of paper. Do not understand me as making an order, but I want samples and prices. I do not ask very low prices, but reasonable.

JOHN WALKER,
State Auditor.

In reply Mr. Daly forwarded the following reminder:

ST. LOUIS, March 6, 1882.

Hon. John Walker, State Auditor, Jefferson City:

DEAR SIR—Your letter of the 2d of March, asking for prices of envelopes for your office, is to hand, and its contents carefully noted.

The contract for furnishing stationery for each and all of the executive departments was awarded to us on the 29th day of last June. We have faithfully kept our part of the contract and intend to do so, as our bond demands. You seem to ignore the contract and order from other houses the articles we have contracted with the State to furnish. We cannot make new contracts with every new official who disregards the responsibility of the State to keep its part of a contract. Respectfully,

JOHN J. DALY & CO.

The last communication will undoubtedly stir up a hornet's nest, but Mr. Daly thinks it rather strange that the present administration seems unwilling to adhere to its own contract.

Stocks, Bonds, Financial and Wall Street Gossip.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Wall street markets opens weak, with Louisville and Nashville 1½ lower and Northwest ⅞ off. Other changes were slight but in a downward direction. It is understood the St. Paul and Omaha Company will consider this week the matter of increase in the capital stock based upon additional mileage. Thirty is said to have been refused within a few days for a large block of Rochester and Pittsburg stock. The Executive Committee of the Western Union recommended the payment of the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. The quarterly statement will probably show a material increase in the surplus. The pooling arrangement between different cable companies will be of benefit to the Western Union. It is expected to take effect next week. It was reported last evening that Union Pacific is being raided for the purpose of shaking out the Boston holders. A close observer of the market said most of the Union Pacific sold yesterday was short stock. There were some good orders to buy in the vicinity of 111. It is alleged that Gould is a bear on the stock. Orders have been given to employ every available man in pushing the work on the Omaha extension of the Missouri Pacific Road.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE.

Tuesday's receipts fair, and the quality quite decent, consisting mainly of light to good native steers of 800 to 1,300 lbs, which sold well enough. Eastern and interior shippers and local speculators entered the market early in the day and made liberal purchases, so by the hour of noon a clearance was effected at prices ranging from $4 25 to $6 per 100 lbs in extremes. In fact everything sold well. Stock and feeding steers scarce.

WESTERN UNION.

Quarterly Statement—Annual Report of the Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The quarterly statement of the Western Union Telegraph Company shows a net increase for the quarter ending December 31, 1881, of $1,731,235, which, added to the surplus of October 1 of $629,759, gives $2,360,994; deducting appropriations for dividends, etc., leaves a surplus January 1 of $1,035,273. This statement closes the last quarter of the first year of operations of the company since taking up the American Union and Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies, with the following results for the calendar year of 1881: Gross revenues, $16,868,396; expenses, $9,489,269; net profits, $7,379,127, from which have been appropriated dividends, interest, new construction, etc., $6,492,139, leaving a surplus of $886,988, which, added to the surplus the first of the year, gives a surplus of January 1st as stated above. The net revenue for the quarter ending March 31 is partially estimated at $1,550,000, which added to the surplus and deducting appropriations for dividend, etc., leaves a surplus for the quarter of $1,259,073. A dividened of 1½ was declared payable April 15.

UNION PACIFIC.

At the annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad to-day the following directors were elected: Sidney Dillon, Elisha Atkins, Frederick L. Ames, Ezra H. Baker, S. H. H. Clark, F. Gordon Dexter, David Dows, Greenville M. Dodge, T. T. Eckert, Jay Gould, Solon Humphreys, Russell Sage, Augustus Schell, Wm. L. Scott and John Sharp. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Sidney Dillon was re-elected president, and a quarterly dividend of 1¾ declared. The total earnings this year were $24,258,817; last year $22,455,134. Expenses this year, $12,480,342; last year, $10,545,119. Net earnings this year $11,778,474, against $11,910,015 last year. The decrease in earnings is accounted for by the fact that the company laid $500,749 worth of rails in excess of last year. The debt of the company is $4,035,078, which is more than covered by available bonds, securities and the supplies on hand. The company holds securities in stocks and bonds of other companies for $51,773,930, twenty-two millions of which are quoted at par and pay dividends. Over twenty-five million of these securities net the company 2½ per cent profit per annum. The company owns material on hand valued at $3,164,476 and has saved half a million dollars in the purchase of steel rails. Freight carriage increased 122,859,000 tons for the year. The company recently obtained from the United States Supreme Court a judgment against the United States Government for $2,000,000 back charges, which will be worth in the future at least $500,000 yearly to the company.

A SLICK SWINDLE.

St. Louis Salesmen and a Bogus Texas Firm in a Ring,

And Defrauding St. Louis and New York Merchants on a Wholesale Scale.

The Queer Firm of A. P. Ryan, and How it Did Business—A Clever Fraud.

A very clever swindle has been unearthed, which promises to develop features that will be of interest, not only to the merchants of St. Louis, but those throughout the country. The facts in the case secured by a POST-DISPATCH reporter, after an extensive search, are these:

In December last the Associated Press announced the failure of the dry goods house of A. P. Ryan, of Fort Worth, Texas, which fact caused quite a sensation among the wholesale dry goods and clothing men of St. Louis, quite a number of whom held claims for large amounts against the house. Among the most deeply interested were J. H. Wear, Boogher & Co., who were involved to the extent of about $5,000; Crow, Hargadine & Co., about $4,000; Chase & Cabot, $3,500; Wm. H. Kellogg & Co., about $3,500; Schwab & Co., about $5,000, and a number of other houses for smaller amounts. Besides these it was known that H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York, were in for about $8,000.

Several of the St. Louis firms immediately began to take steps towards the recovery of the amounts due them, and a state of affairs was uncovered which carried the conviction that a very

BOLD FRAUD HAD BEEN PERPETRATED.

It appears that about two years ago Mr. Ryan started in business at Fort Worth with a small stock purchased in St. Louis for cash and was apparently building up a good trade. His standing in Fort Worth seemed to be good, and as he always paid cash for his goods he soon established a fair credit here as well as with Claflin & Co. in New York, where he pursued the same cash course. Finally he began to buy small bills on short time, and as payment was made promptly his credit remained unimparied. Last spring a young man named R. E. Cross, who was then a salesman for Chase & Cabot, and formerly held a similar position with Wm. H. Kellogg & Co., announced that he was about to resign his position to take the management of the Ryan house in Fort Worth. It is said that to some be asserted that he was to be Ryan's partner, while to others he was going as manager under salary, but to all he stated that he made the change in order to better his condition, and as he was then getting a salary of $3,000 a year it was inferred that he had

FALLEN INTO A PERFECT BONANZA.

Soon after his connection with Ryan the latter came to St. Louis and bought goods, and afterward the purchasing was done by Cross. At that time it was supposed that these purchases were confined to one or two houses here, but it now transpires that the same were distributed liberally and generally among the houses here where credit could be obtained.

The first intimation received here that the Fort Worth house was not upon a solid financial basis was the news that Mrs. A. P. Ryan had attached the stock to satisfy a claim against her husband of $10,000, money loaned. A traveling salesman named Williams, who represented the clothing house of Schwab & Co., happened to be in Fort Worth at the time, and after communicating the state of affairs to his employers immediately placed another attachment on the stock. Chase & Cabot then followed with an attachment to satisfy their claim, and there the matter rested until about a month ago. At first it was thought that the failure was legitimate, but facts began to leak out which put a different aspect upon the affair and prompted H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York, and Wear, Boogher & Co., of this city, to make a further investigation. It was then discovered that a greater portion of Ryan's stock, the value of which is variously estimated at from had been transferred to his brother, Volney Ryan, who keeps a store at Paris, Texas, and C. C. Ellis, a merchant doing business at Honey Grove, Texas. Whether this transfer had been made by a cash sale or without any consideration was not learned.

Chase & Cabot now joined with Claflin & Co. and Wear, Boogher & Co. to attach the stocks at Paris and Honey Grove, and last week an attorney was sent down to investigate. He employed Messrs. Hale & Scott, attorneys at Paris, and Templeton & Carter, at Fort Worth, to assist him. The attorney returned yesterday and reports that he succeeded in intercepting and attaching ninety-eight trunks and forty-three boxes, containing goods en route from Fort Worth to Paris and Honey Grove, and that he has secured sufficient goods to satisfy the claims of the three houses he represents. A full investigation of the case will be made by the grand jury at Fort Worth, and it is claimed that sufficient evidence has been obtained to indict A. P. Ryan, Volney Ryan and R. E. Cross, and to establish the fact that a joint conspiracy to defraud existed between these three men and a number of St. Louis salesmen. Mr. Bowman states that a thorough investigation will be made which promises to develop one of the most interesting conspiracy cases on record. Altogether A. P. Ryan managed to secure about $60,000 worth of goods from St. Louis merchants, and it is charged that he and his copartners were materially assisted in this enterprise by several St. Louis salesmen.

HEALING THE WOUNDS.

A Sister's Grievance and a Divorce Wiped From the Docket.

The trial docket of Judge Horner's court this morning was unexpectedly relieved of two cases for which all the necessary arrangements had been made. In the one instance Miss Emma E. Hurst, sister of the proprietor of Hurst's Hotel, on Fourth street, was plaintiff. This young lady has previously figured as a litigant against her brother in another division of the court, suing him for compensation for services as seamstress and factotum of the hotel. In the suit before Judge Horner she alleged that on two occasions in July, 1880, her brother grievously assaulted her, whipped her, threw her on the floor and tore her clothes, for all of which she asked damages in the sum of $800. For a second cause of action Miss Hurst alleged that her brother broke into her sleeping apartment at the hotel, pitched her trunk and wardrobe out into the hall, choked and whipped her, and tore the clothing which she had on at the time. For the second application of manual discipline Miss Hurst claimed $1,600 from her brother. When Judge Horner called up the case this morning a memorandum was handed to the clerk: "Dismissed by the plaintiff," signifying that peace once more reigns in the Hurst family. Mr. Hurst had filed an answer in court alleging that his sister, on the occasion mentioned, had raised a great disturbance in the hotel, annoying his family and the guests by yelling and screaming through the hallway, and that in laying hands upon her he used no more force than was necessary to keep her quiet.

The Dannenbrink Divorce.

The second case which the court was prepared to hear and dispose of was the contested divorce of Henry against Christina Dannenbrink. The husband stated that the marriage took place in November, 1879, in Randolph county, Ill. They lived together until January, 1881. Mr. Dannenbrink alleged that his wife indulged in tippling habits and under such influence was very cruel to his children by a former marriage; that she whipped them so severely that blood would frequently tell the tale, and that on one occasion, her husband alleged, she drew a carving knife on him. To all of this Mrs. Dannenbrink filed an answer and cross-b[illegible] alleging that her condition was rendered i[illegible] ble by the conduct of her husband; th[illegible] whipped her repeatedly, and attested [illegible] for her by kicks and blows and vile [illegible] Horner called the case this mo[illegible] Ed. VEHICLE LICENSE.

A New Way of Collecting the Tax on Conveyances.

Nearly a Thousand Owners and Drivers of Unlicensed Vehicles Arrested by the Police—Over $100,000 Revenue Lost to the City.

When the police platoons assembled yesterday morning to go on duty, at each of the main stations they were instructed to arrest all violators of the vehicle license ordinance. By 9 o'clock last night 500 drivers and owners had had the hand of the law laid upon them for failing to comply with the provisions of the city ordinances, and to-day they were arraigned in the Carondelet, First and Second District Police Courts. The cases are made under ordinance 37, articles 1 and 3, the substance of which is not generally known: "There shall be annually levied and collected a license tax upon all cabs, hacks or hackney coaches, private carriages, barouches, buggies, wagons, omnibuses, carts, drays, and other vehicles using the streets for trade or any other purpose, public or private, whether the owner resides in the city or out of it, as follows: on each buggy or sulky $3, hand-cart $1, horse-cart $3, cab $5, dray or furniture car $10, baggage wagon $12, two-horse omnibus $15, four horse omnibus $20, six horse omnibus $25, each hack or hackney carriage $12, one horse private carriage $5, two horse private carriage $10, each one-horse barouche $3, each two-horse barouche $5, each hotel coach or carriage $15, each heavy truck $30, each sprinkling wagon $10, each one-horse wagon not before mentioned $3, each two-horse wagon not before mentioned $10, each three horse wagon not before mentioned $12, each four-horse wagon not before mentioned $15, for each five and six-horse vehicle not before mentioned $30."

It is further ordained by the municipal laws that the license plate shall be placed in a conspicuous and particular position, so that the officers yesterday had but little difficulty in deciding who was wanted and who not. No class of vehicles was spared—physicians' rigs, trucks, baggage-wagons, carriages, drays, carts and every shape of vehicle were examined that came to the notice of the officers, and this morning a long line of different rigs stood on Clark avenue from Eleventh to Thirteenth and on Biddle and Fifth streets awaiting the disposition of the cases in court. When the arrests were made yesterday the news of the intentions of the police spread rapidly about town, and at 2 p. m. it was impossible to reach a desk in the Collector's office at the Court-house, which was packed with owners and drivers, anxious to procure licenses and escape arrest. A number of those arrested secured licenses at once, and to-day presented them in the Police Court, thereby securing a dismissal of the cases against them. A few years ago the owners associated and organized for the purpose of testing the validity of the city ordinances prescribing the license, but it was found to be good, and the test ended by the contestants paying the amount of tax prescribed.

The raid yesterday was the result of a consultation between the Comptroller, Collector and Police Department, the object being to increase the municipal revenue. By the failure of drivers to pay the required tax on private conveyances and business vehicles the city is annually cheated out of over $100,000 revenue, which it is now proposed to collect with the assistance of the police department. To-day the noble work of the peelers was carried on with the same vigor as yesterday, and all day long the station houses were crowded with prisoners' bondsmen and friends. In cases where the arrest interfered with business personal bonds were taken, with the place of business and other necessary information, and the prisoners were released.

Important Notice—Words of Warning!

We desire to give this friendly word of warning to whom it may concern, that all persons who have been or are now dealing in a preparation called "Clayton & Russell's Celebrated Stomach Bitters," put upon the market by Adams & Co., of New York, render themselves liable to prosecution and damages, as said article has been pronounced by the U. S. Circuit Court, Southern District, New York, in a decision rendered by his Honor, Judge Blatchford, February, 1882, as being an imitation of Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters, and who granted a decree of perpetual injunction with damages against the said Adams & Co., for violation of our Trade Mark in the premises. The principle of this important decision applies with equal force to any article of Bitters the labels of which bear a general resemblance to our Trade Mark, as well as to the refilling of our old bottles with spurious stuff, or selling in bulk any article purporting to be our preparation, and hence this friendly word of caution. We never fail to convict, as the Court Records of New Orleans, St. Louis, New York and other points fully affirm. HOSTETTER & SMITH.
Pittsburg, March, 1882.

LAST night, or rather early this morning, housebreakers tried to get into the house of J. R. Jungling, 1608½ North Fourteenth street. Their noise aroused the family and the burglars were scared off by Mr. J. raising the upstairs window, as both men were seen running towards Cass avenue. Guns and pistols were at hand, but no chance was given to use them.

THE Visitation Committee of the Knights of Pythias will pay a fraternal visit to Chevalier Lodge, No. 70, K. of P., this evening, at its hall, Fifth and Franklin ave.

TENNYSON'S NEW POEM,

"THE CHARGE OF THE HEAVY BRIGADE,"

Has met with a great deal of adverse criticism from the American press. Whatever its merits or defects may be, we beg leave for time to settle; but we are happy to state that the opinion of the good people of St. Louis regarding another subject, viz., our enlarged and elegantly-decorated establishment, has been unanimously expressed to the effect that there is nothing equal to it in the West.

However, to change the subject from CRITICISM TO CLOTHING, we would respectfully state that our daily arrivals of

CHOICE SPRING GARMENTS

Are unusually enticing, and deserve the attention of all buyers of MEN'S OR BOYS' CLOTHING.

"SPARE THE PEOPLE."

"If Not, God Spare the Czar!"—Victor Hugo's Manifesto.

A War With the Basutos Imminent—Disturbances at Cracow—Seven Cardinals to be Created—Foreign News.

Germany.

BERLIN, March 8.—The Lower House of the Prussian Diet has passed the Government bill establishing a legation at the Vatican.

SPECULATING ON WAR.

LONDON, March 8.—The Czar has sent congratulations to the new King and Queen of Servia. The establishment of the new dominion is regarded with favor by all the European powers save Turkey. The Czar in this communication expresses publicly his good will and friendly relations with Germany, but at the same time the German newspapers and associations openly discuss the probabilities of war with Russia and point to what advantages Germany might gain in such a conflict. The Kleine Gazette, inspired sometimes by the Prussian Foreign Office, proposes the annexation by Germany of East Siberia and Saghalien in the event of a victorious war with Russia.

France.

PARIS, March 8.—M. Victor Hugo has issued a protest against the sentence passed on the Nihilists at St. Petersburg. He says civilization ought to interfere, and warns the Czar: "Spare the people. If not—God spare the Czar!"

STOCK COMPANIES.

PARIS, March 8.—It is said that since the subsidence of the crisis from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 francs worth of stock, chiefly of the least speculative kinds, have been absorbed by the investing public, and that large amounts have been offered the promoters of the revival of the Union Generale.

Austro-Hungary.

LONDON, March 8.—A dispatch from Vienna says: "It is rumored that the English Government has proposed a conference to settle the Bosnian question."

DISTURBANCE AT CRACOW.

VIENNA, March 8.—The authorities of Cracow, learning of an intended demonstration by the students of that city against the sentence of death recently passed on the ten Nihilists at St. Petersburg, attempted to suppress it. In doing so a fight ensued, in which two students and four gendarmes were killed.

UNDER ARREST.

The Austrian Commander at Ragusa has placed Mr. Evans, an English war correspondent, under arrest, claiming that, notwithstanding orders to the contrary, he was sending information to his paper, the publication of which would give aid and comfort to the enemy.

England.

LONDON, March 8.—The Times' St. Petersburg special declares Gen. Skobeleff's speeches were prearranged between him and Gen. Ignatieff. It is said the object of the latter is to embroil matters to such a degree as to create the opportunity for him to offer his services to the Czar as Minister of Foreign Affairs in order to straighten them.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

The trial of Dr. George H. Lamson, charged with poisoning his brother-in-law, commenced to-day. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

AN INVENTION.

LONDON, March 8.—The report about the convention betw[illegible] Germany and France for the annexatio[illegible] the latter of Luxembourg is an invent[illegible].

MACLEAN.

LONDON, March 8.—The would be assassin MacLean has been identified as the man who last summer frequented the vicinity of Windsor Castle and acted in a suspicious manner.

STEALING A PICTURE.

LONDON, March 8.—At the Old Bailey to-day James Harris, aged 38 years, a p[illegible], was convicted of stealing from the [illegible] idence of John Derby, Allcroft, near Lancashire Gates, Hyde Park, a picture known as "Monarch of the Meadows," valued at £5,000. The picture was cut from the frame on the 14th of September, 1881, while the house was being repaired. Harris was employed there at the time.

Italy.

ROME, March 8.—At the approaching consistory the Pope will create seven new Cardinals, including the most Rev. Dr. McCabe, Archbishop of Dublin. It is understood this expresses the Pope's approval of the efforts Archbishop McCabe made in behalf of the cause of law and order in Ireland.

South Africa.

LONDON, March 8.—A dispatch from the Cape of Good Hope says: "A war is iminent between the Basutos and the Cape Colonists."

Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—The Czar has privately received General Skobeleff at Gatschina.

DISBANDED.

Detectives in League with Criminals, Burglars and Thieves.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 8.—The Corps of the Central Office of Detectives in this city has been disbanded and the department abolished by order of Mayor King, because of charges that the officers of the department were in league with and controlled by burglars and other criminals. Official detective work will be hereafter done by special officers of each police district.

Small-Pox Prevailing.

Special to the Post Dispatch.

GALLIPOLIS, O., March 8.—Small-pox is prevailing here to an alarming extent in the vicinity of Morgan and Center. There are forty or more cases reported and there have been four deaths in the last three days. The disease was taken for chicken pox and other cutaneous affections and has been treated with the simplest remedies with its contagious character unsuspected.

Found Murdered.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., March 8.—John O. Massey and wife, an aged couple living near here and possessed of considerable means, were found murdered this morning in the house and the money gone.

Died.

LOUISVILLE, March 8.—Henry C. Pindell, a prominent lawyer of this city, died this forenoon, aged 52.

Omaha News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, NEB., March 8.—The trial of Charles Kosters, charged with murdering Oscar Hammer, of Chicago, last Christmas, was begun in the District Court this morning. The jury panel has already been exhausted and fifty extra jurymen ordered to be drawn. It is doubtful about getting a jury even from this number, as there is great excitement here concerning the case and competent jurymen are scarce. Kosters was first indicted for murder in the second degree, but the grand jury was afterwards declared illegal and a new one formed which returned a bill for murder in the first degree. It will be a very hard fought and exciting trial.

THE STRIKERS

are getting ready for a grand parade at two o'clock. They expect to make a great demonstration. The Molders' Union, Bricklayers' Union and other labor organizations not in the strike are expected to march with them. The smelting works yielded to the demand for twenty five cents advance yesterday without permitting the men to strike. The strikers expect to get the Plattsmouth laborers now at work here to quit to-day or to-morrow, and are very hopeful of the final result. The weather is temperate and a light snow is falling.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Both Assassinated in Their Own House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MT. VERNON, KY., March 8.—An unknown man went to the house of Mary Sigman, walked into the room where she and her five children, with her mother, were sleeping. He first shot dead Mary Sigman, and then left the room, but soon returned and sent a fatal ball through the body of her mother, about 80 years old. There were nine wounds in the body of Mary Sigman, five of which were sufficient to cause death. The assassin fired fifteen shots in all. There is no doubt that he had confederates. James Bishop, a rough looking character, who came here last Friday from Tennessee, has been arrested, charged with the murder. He is now in jail, and his preliminary trial is set for Friday.

THE MISSOURI BANDIT.

Jesse James Mortally Wounded and Ed. Miller Killed.

Seven of the Sheriff's Posse Killed and Three Wounded—A Desperate Struggle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—A special to the Daily News from Kansas City says a passenger who arrived this morning on the Wabash train relates that while the train was waiting at Moberly Junction a Sheriff's officer, worn out and

SPLATTERED WITH MUD,

arrived from the West, and told a most remarkable story, which, if true, will cause rejoicing in railroad circles. The officer referred to said Jesse James was captured last night at some point in Kansas, he could not remember the exact location. Jesse James and a comrade, supposed to be Ed. Miller, were in heavy timber. The relator was one of the pursuing party. While trying to force an entrance to the cabin from the outside seven of his party were killed and three wounded. James and Miller made a desperate resistance. The fight was brief but bloody. The Sheriff's officer claimed Ed. Miller was instantly killed and that and is mortally wounded. The attack was a complete surprise to Jesse James and his companions but they were so securely barricaded that the attack was a disastrous one for the Sheriff's posse. An attempt is being actively made to corroborate the statement given above and to obtain fuller particulars.

SURROUNDED IN A LOG CABIN

The Linseed Oil Companies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Consolidated Linseed Oil Company are holding a special meeting in this city to-day. The meeting is strictly private, but it is understood the purpose is to discuss a revision of the price lists. There are fifty-five linseed oil manufacturing houses represented in the consolidation, the territory of which covers the entire West. At the meeting now in progress thirty-six manufactories have representatives attending. E. M. Wood, of Dayton, Ohio, is President. The Straw Board Manufacturer's Association of America met here to-day and arranged the details of the annual meeting, which will be held at the White Mountains, June 21st.

Freight Rates.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Commissioner Midgely has issued a joint freight tariff on business of the Southwestern railroads east-bound, to take effect March 13 from Missouri River points. These rates are to Mississippi River points: First-class, 60 cents; second, 45; third, 30; fourth, 20; fifth, 19; sixth, 20; seventh, 20; eighth, 15; ninth 20; wheat, 17; other cereals, 12½. From the same points to Chicago and Milwaukee, first-class, 75 cents; second, 60; third, 45; fourth, fifth and sixth, 27; seventh, 25; eighth, 19; ninth, 25½; tenth, 25; wheat, 21; other grain, 16½. Sprague Estate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 8.—The Supreme Court to-day decided that all property of the Sprague estate should be sold at auction in bulk. The date of sale has not yet been fixed. It was agreed the trustee should prepare and submit to the court the form of deed which he thinks he can give, so that all bidders may know what kind of a deed they bid for.

Urging Relief.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 8.—A public meeting of the Board of Trade adopted the following:

Resolved, This board respectfully urges upon Congress the propriety of making a sufficient appropriation to enable the War Department to continue its work of relieving the pressing wants of sufferers by the overflow of the Mississippi River.

Mr. Allen's Condition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—There is little change in the condition of Mr. Allen. His family report him as having rested quite comfortably last night and his condition somewhat improved.

The Glucose Industry.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Western delegation appeared before the Ways and Means Committee this morning and made argument against the bill which proposes to impose a tax on glucose. They claimed the only substantial opposition to the glucose proceeds from the sugar refiners, and maintained the glucose industry is a growing one in the West; that it affords a large market for the products of the country, and ought to be encouraged and not discouraged.

Discouraged Committees.

Special to the Post Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The House committees are becoming somewhat discouraged. Nearly every one of their recommendations, aside from the appropriation bills, has been rejected by the House. The latest instance was yesterday's action on the resolution for a junketing trip to New Orleans, which was dreadfully slaughtered.

ARTHUR AND CONKLING.

It is whispered Conkling's declination may lead to a rupture between himself and Arthur, as it is believed he urged in his letter of declination the appointment of Clarence Seward, but that the President is determined not to appoint him.

A QUARTER OF A MILLION RELIEF.

The bill is to be reported by the committee to-day for a quarter of a million for aid to the Mississippi valley sufferers, who now number nearly 70,000 people, and it will pass very promptly.

DANENHOWER'S EXPERIENCES IN SIBERIA.

A letter received by W. W. Danenhower from his son details the experiences of the party. After leaving the Jeannette, he traveled 700 miles over the ice to reach the Lena. They were one time five days and four nights without sleep. The trip from the mouth of the Lena to Yakutsk took a month. They found three log stations on the way, in the best of which were twenty people around a dead horse, thawing it out to cut up for food. The Governor at Yakutsk entertained the party Christmas Eve.

The memorial of the Iowa Legislature for $7,000,000 for the improvement of the Missouri River was presented to the Senate.

CABINET SPECULATIONS.

The rumor that Hatton is to succeed Howe and the latter to succeed Kirkwood, is revived.

UNSEATING A DEMOCRAT.

There is said to be a probability of unseating Mr. Shelley, Democrat, of the Fourth Alabama District, by the committee, and the seating of Mr. Smith, Republican.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Under yesterday's decision forty-four bills have to be passed or laid aside before Kasson's tariff commission bill can be reached.

ST. LOUIS DELEGATION.

The St. Louis River Convention Committee is before the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi. An argument was made similar to that of yesterday.

SIMON CAMERON.

Simon Cameron reached the 83d year of his age to-day. He is reported in excellent health. He was first elected to the Senate in 1845.

Contest Over Apollinaris Water.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—There is a sharp fight in progress here between the proprietors of domestic mineral waters and the owners and agents of the Apollinaris water. Attorney-General MacVeagh decided that Apollinaris is an artificial water and therefore dutiable. Secretary Folger recently reversed this decision and decided that Apollinaris was entitled to enter this country without payment of custom dues. A resolution is pending in Congress directing the Secretary of the Treasury not to take any steps toward carrying out his decision until there can be thorough investigation as to whether Apollinaris is to be placed on the free list. Able legal talent has been employed on both sides. Ex-Senator Conkling is said to be counsel for the Apollinaris interests, and to have received a cash fee of $50,000.

MOVE FOR THE ELECTION OF POSTMASTER, ETC.

Senator Saunders, of Nebraska, submitted to-day a joint resolution for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States that will allow the people to elect all postmasters, Internal Revenue officers, United States marshals and district attorneys.

Senator Saunders is a member of the Committee on Civil Service Reform, and he says that after studying this subject carefully he is satisfied that his resolution embodies reform in its most practical shape. He claims that to make these offices elective by the people would relieve the President of much annoyance and vexation that attaches to his office and would also be a great relief to members of Congress. He says half of the time of Congressmen is taken up in attending to the distribution of Federal offices, and the President complains the duty of filling the petty offices of the Government imposes the heaviest burden on him. Mr. Saunders thinks this can be remedied by giving to the people the power to choose their own officers, and if they make any mistakes they will soon rectify them. The Senator will call up the resolution at the first opportunity and submit some remarks in its favor.

Postal Order.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—The Postmaster-General has directed that after July 1st no allowance will be made Postmasters for advertising dead letters, unless authority is first obtained from the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

XLVII. CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Mr. Garland introduced a bill for the construction, completion and preservation of levees on the Mississippi River temporarily repaired.

Mr. Jackson reported the original bill appropriating $25,000 to continue the improvements of Memphis Harbor, Tenn.

The bill for a commission on the alcoholic liquor traffic came up and Mr Bayard's motion to commit it to the Finance Committee was rejected; yeas 19, nays 26. The vote was a party one except that Mr. Cameron, of Wisconsin, voted aye with the Democrats, and Mr. George and Mr. Davis, of Illinois, voted no with the Republicans. The bill was then read and pending the motion by Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, to amend so as to prevent the commission from being exclusively partisan, the morning hour expired, and the bill was laid aside.

House.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Mr. Reed, from the Committee on Rules, reported amendments to the rules presented by him some days ago and printed in the Record. There have been some slight modifications made, the most important of which is the addition of a clause providing it shall be in order for the House, on motion, to go into committee to designate a bill which shall be first considered. Laid over under the rules.

Mr. Harris reported a bill authorizing the construction of vessels of war for the navy of the United States. Committee of the whole.

In the Hands of a Mob.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, TENN., March 8.—A conflagration occurred here, destroying property valued at $50,000, including six business houses. The fire originated on Market street, and is supposed to have been incendiary. The people burned out were small dealers, carrying but light insurance, and the loss falls more heavily on the sufferers. The city seems to be in the hands of a mob, who seem fully determined to destroy it. A mass meeting was held to devise means of protection.

WESTERN UNION.

Quarterly Statement—Annual Report of the Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The quarterly statement of the Western Union Telegraph Company shows a net increase for the quarter ending December 31, 1881, of $1,731,235, which, added to the surplus of October 1 of $629,759, gives $2,360,994; deducting appropriations for dividends, etc., leaves a surplus January 1 of $1,035,273. This statement closes the last quarter of the first year of operations of the company since taking up the American Union and Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies, with the following results for the calendar year of 1881: Gross revenues, $16,868,396; expenses, $9,489,269; net profits, $7,379,127, from which have been appropriated dividends, interest, new construction, etc., $6,492,139, leaving a surplus of $886,988, which, added to the surplus the first of the year, gives a surplus of January 1st as stated above. The net revenue for the quarter ending March 31 is partially estimated at $1,550,000, which added to the surplus and deducting appropriations for dividend, etc., leaves a surplus for the quarter of $1,259,073. A dividened of 1½ was declared payable April 15.

UNION PACIFIC.

At the annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad to day the following directors were elected: Sidney Dillon, Elisha Atkins, Frederick L. Ames, Ezra H. Baker, S. H. H. Clark, F. Gordon Dexter, David Dows, Greenville M. Dodge, T. T. Eckert, Jay Gould, Solon Humphreys, Russell Sage, Augustus Schell, Wm. L. Scott and John Sharp. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Sidney Dillon was re-elected president, and a quarterly dividend of 1¾ declared. The total earnings this year were $24,258,817; last year $22,455,134. Expenses this year, $12,480,342; last year, $10,545,119. Net earnings this year $11,778,474, against $11,910,015 last year. The decrease in earnings is accounted for by the fact that the company laid $590,749 worth of rails in excess of last year. The debt of the company is $4,035,078, which is more than covered by available bonds, securities and the supplies on hand. The company holds securities in stocks and bonds of other companies for $51,773,930, twenty-two millions of which are quoted at par and pay dividends. Over twenty-five million of these securities net the company 2½ per cent profit per annum. The company owns material on hand valued at $3,164,476 and has saved half a million dollars in the purchase of steel rails. Freight carriage increased 122,859,000 tons for the year. The company recently obtained from the United States Supreme Court a judgment against the United States Government for $2,000,000 back charges, which will be worth in the future at least $500,000 yearly to the company.

THE SITUATION DESPERATE.

More Ravages and Devastation by the Flood.

MEMPHIS, March 8.—The river remains stationary here, with 36 feet on gauge. Passengers who arrived this morning from below report the levee at Helena still intact. Yesterday afternoon a force of 300 men were at work guarding all the weak points. The river then was rising steadily at Austin, Mississippi, between Memphis and Helena. The river had cut through the town, destroying the principal buildings, among the number the Masonic temple, and the Centennial block, a large brick building, is almost demolished, the water being twenty-five feet deep all around it. Several storehouses and dwellings are washed away and carried a distance of half a mile. The loss of stock continues and the situation is hourly growing more desperate.

A Railroad Muddle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Supreme Court of the United States has set aside the decree made by Judge Drummond under which the Chicago, Danville and Vincennes Railroad was sold to the bondholders for one million five hundred dollars. The purchasers are organizing the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, which seems to be put in an embarrassing position in the decision. Mr. F. W. Huidekoper, ex-president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, said to a reporter that he did not think the decision is as sweeping as foreshadowed in the dispatches, and he did not apprehend any serious trouble for his company. His company had bought the Chicago, Danville and Vincennes in good faith, and he had never heard where a party made a purchase in good faith and was afterwards deprived of the same. When the foreclosure was ordered by the United States Circuit Court, it required a bond of $500,000 to supersede the execution of the decree. This the company failed to give, and accordingly the decree was executed by the judicial sale. The title of the old company was diverted and the property has come to third parties, whose right therein would doubtless be fully protected.

The Murderer at Large.

BOSTON, March 8.—There are many unfavorable complaints of the inaction of the police that allowed the man who murdered Mrs. Bell yesterday to walk away under their eyes without stopping to inquire regarding the trouble at Mrs. Bell's residence. The murderer is still at large. Suspicion points to an ex-police officer in this city.

"PECULIAR PRACTICE."

So One Attorney Denounces The Conduct of Another in Open Court.

The Black Case Continued Again To-Day in the Court of Criminal Correction.

And now comes John L. Black into the Court of Criminal Correction to answer a charge of making a corrupt voluntary oath before the great Board of Police Commissioners against Gov. Charles P. Johnson. And also come Charles Noland, Joseph G. Lodge and Charles P. Johnson to prosecute him on the same. And several important witnesses for the State do not come, while Judge Cady and Deputy Sheriff Archie Carr are there already, and a large crowd of lookers-on interested in dark and unknown ways also came to see, and the following is a true report of the performance they then and there did witness in the temple of Justice, where the great aim is to weigh out justice to those accused of grievous crimes.

Mr. Charles Noland, appearing for the State, said: "Your Honor, several important witnesses for the State do not answer. Mr. Steinberg, an important witness, is out of the city and has been for the past ten days. Miss Johnson, also an important witness, is out of the State. Robinson, the short-hand reporter who copied the original affidavit, is not here; neither is Judge Laughlin nor Mr. Jay L. Torrey, both important witnesses. I saw the attorney for the defendant two days ago and then he wanted us to continue the case. We expected to be ready, but could not be as was afterwards found out, and now, I suppose, they will insist upon a trial now that the State is not ready."

F. D. Turner, the defendant's attorney referred to above, said: "We do not insist upon an affidavit from the State for a continuance. We want a speedy trial. Two days ago we wanted a continuance, but they said they were going to trial, and so we prepared. Now we insist on a trial."

Mr. Noland — As I expected. Now, your Honor, there is another matter At the second continuance of this case Mr. Turner, in open court, before a number of attorneys and many witnesses, promised to have the original affidavit in court. Only the day before yesterday he told me that he had parted with the affidavit, which was now in the hands of the defendant. Now, your Honor knows that we cannot force the defendant to produce the affidavit in testimony against himself. Of course the representatives of the State believed that the promise of an officer of the court would be kept, but we are not prepared to meet Mr. Turner, who follows with which we are unacquainted.

Mr. Lodge—Your Honor, Mr. Turner does not deny that he made that promise. Now he is an officer of the court, and I ask your Honor to issue an order compelling him to produce that affidavit or show cause why he does not. We are determined to try this case.

Judge Cady—I have not heard Mr. Turner deny it. It would be useless to deny the statement.

Mr. Noland—I will then ask Mr. Turner in open court whether he will produce that affidavit in court.

Mr. Turner—I will not make any promises. You can ask any question you feel like. I believe it is possible to produce that affidavit, and maybe I will.

This assurance was received with much doubt by the attorneys for the State.

Judge Cady said: "By producing this affidavit much avoidable trouble can be saved. I can't, however, force the defendant to produce the affidavit in testimony against himself, but I will grant a reasonable continuance." April 3 was fixed upon for the next performance. Upon the granting of the continuance Black, who was in attendance, stepped briskly out of the court-room, the healthiest specimen of a convalescent sufferer from sciatica that has been arraigned in the Court of Criminal Correction in a long time. The case was once continued on an uncertified note from a Grinnell, Ill., physician. The history of the affidavit is an interesting one, dating from the beginning of the gambling war, which has been quiet for the past two months. Gov. Johnson in an interview criticised the action of the Board of Police Commissioners in allowing gambling to go on unchecked. On November 8, 1881, he was invited by a subpœna to appear before that body and give his ideas on the question. He appeared and was met by a long list of questions concerning himself and the gamblers, and with two affidavits. One was signed Morgan Boland, and charged him with making advances to Boland, while the latter was vice-president of the board, to form a gambling ring in this city. The other was signed by John L. Black, an employe of Pate's, charging him with making an offer to withhold from attacking the gamblers for $1,000. He at once swore out warrants charging Boland and Black with making corrupt voluntary oaths. Boland was convicted, and his case is now pending in the Court of Appeals. Black was seized with sciatica at Greenville, Ill., and did not recover until a short time ago. The affidavit was in the hands of Chief Kennett and later in those of Black's attorney, Mr. Turner. All this time it was available to the State's representations as documentary evidence against the defendant. Black's attorney promised that he would produce it at the trial, but a few days ago made the startling revelation to the State's attorneys that he had passed the affidavit over to his client. This ends the affidavit business. No process of the court can force him to produce or refrain from destroying it. It was this that Messrs. Noland and Lodge referred to as the "peculiar practice of law."

IMPERFECTION.

She sat, half shaded from the gl
Of common light—a creature rare,
And finished with perfection;
From dark crowned head to slender foot,
I looked—no mortal e'er could put
Dispraise in his inspection.

The angel face that men had praised
I closer scanned, with lorgnette raised,
My study not concealing;
She bore it with the proudest ease,
She felt so confident to please,
Such beauty fine revealing.

I wondered if an inner grace
Matched all this loveliness of face,
And used my mental eye-glass;
Its searching crystal only saw
A mind so free from rust or flaw
That I laid down my spy-glass.

I grew to love her, day by day;
She knew it, liked it—woman's way—
Was pleased with the new-comer;
She saw another slave enroll
His heart for her serene control,
And liked me—for a summer.

I was a fool; I sought her heart;
The calm face did not feign or start,
Surprise to seem to cover;
She only said, with candid speech,
She really had not meant to teach
Me to become her lover.

I smile to think that I have learned
(With lorgnette critically turned)
So little worth discerning;
For now I see, without my glass,
One great defect—well!, let it pass;
No heart. Was she worth learning?

HISTORIC CHARACTERS.

A Glance at the Thinkers and Statesmen of the Southwest.

"Gath's" New Orleans Letter to Cin. Enquirer.

I was thinking over the public men of the Southwest yesterday, asking myself which of them had been the most influential on his country's civilization and development. Taking the Southwest to be everything below the Tennessee River, between Alabama and the plains, we think of several brilliant people immediately who lived or operated between those limits. It has generally been said that Tennessee is the mother of Southwestern States. The founder was John Sevier, whose family controlled the politics of Arkansas from its admission into the Union down to the civil war, with but few intervals. Then came Sevier's youthful opponent, Andrew Jackson, who in a military point of view was the Washington of the Southwest, and his name was formidable until he died throughout Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas. Almost the last act of his life was to issue a private proclamation to congratulate Texas on coming into the Union, which was carried out under his young disciple, James K. Polk. Although Texas was admitted a few days before Polk came into office, his election compelled that event, and his Administration fought the war with Mexico, which not only protected Texas, but gave us powerful extensions of territory on her west.

Thomas Benton, of Missouri, another Tennessee man, who left Tennessee partly on account of a bloody fight he and his brother had with Jackson, was a remarkable character of this region, but he had unpopular qualities, stirred up unworthy animosities, and his egotism was almost equal to his American historical scholarship. He remains, however, the ablest general writer, prophet and inspirator of the Democracy of the plains, for he was not much an enthusiast on the Texas question, having followed Mr. Van Buren, who pronounced against the Government admitting Texas. Benton turned his attention to a splendid empire west of Missouri, in Oregon, California, Colorado and Kansas. He belongs, therefore, to the North rather than the South, and was so discriminated against in Missouri when Jim Green and several other small-fry divided his raiment. His young proteges, Frank Blair and Montgomery Blair, in the field and the Cabinet, maintained their identity as apostles of the Northern idea.

A man rather overlooked in the Southwest was Gov. Claiborne, the first American Governor of Louisiana. Mr. Cable introduces him in a faint sketch in his novel called "The Grandissimes." He died while the Senator-elect of Louisiana, after having been both Territorial and State Governor. It is his nephew, I believe, who has recently written the "History of Mississippi." Sam. Houston, notwithstanding his remarkable qualities and uniform patriotism and succes, is still very much of a local character, because the rest of the country is but slightly familiar with what has been going on in Texas. The last generation knew Houston much better than the present one.

Two brilliant men in the South were S. S. Prentiss, of Mississippi, and Robert Crittenden, of Arkansas, both of whom, it is said, shortened their days and darkened their bright talents by that dissipation into which young men from the Northern climate were often drawn by their prominence in the far South. Traditions say that Crittenden died on a spree while visiting Prentiss, and Prentiss himself bitterly lamented that he had ever gone South at all and lost the restraints of his New England education. The two celebrated men of Mississippi—Jefferson Davis and John A. Quitman—were both from a more Northern climate. Quitman was of German stock, born at Rhinebeck, on the Hudson River, near the homes of the Livingston family. Davis was born in Kentucky, but a few miles from the birth-place of Abraham Lincoln, and it has been said that both were of poor white stock. Davis, however, was able to get into the regular army when a young man, which supposes some family backing. Up to the rebellion Mr. Davis' record in the Senate and the Cabinet was one of the best from the South. Since the rebellion he appears to have been unable to extricate himself from a series of small fatalities naturally attending a failure like that of which he was the head. Men can be far more right than he was, and yet lose historical approval by the material triumph of their country in consequence of their overthrow. This has been the case in France, to some extent, with Coligny and the Huguenots. In the eyes of all Protestants they were right, but they kept up civil disturbances in France, and that monarchy and nation could only be united and quieted by their suppression, which Richelieu accomplished. How much greater must be the personal failure of the Chief Magistrate of a slavery Republic, particularly since he has had so little cheerfulness in falling into the counter triumph in which his own people have shared. His book belongs to that class of publications which the Puseyites in England read with deep interest, as to whether, if the Reformation had not stopped about one-third of the way in its course, we should not have been considerably better.

The physical heroes of the Southwest during the rebellion were so many, and there was so little of an intellectual or moral kind to distinguish them, that the whole mess is in danger of being confused and forgotten. One of the most remarkable of them, perhaps, was Hindman, of Arkansas, who carpetbagged into that State before the war, with the idea of conquering it by a union of his talents and his ferocity. Though he was a military failure, he prevented the atrocities in his department which were permitted by Sterling Price and others in Missouri, Texas and Louisiana, and he hanged ruffians of his own command, as Burbridge did in Kentucky. Arkansas, since the war, has been rather more orderly than it was before, while the disorders of Missouri since the war have been almost perennial. Hindman was assassinated, like Van Dorn, another capable man in war, the latter by one of his own tribe, who suspected him of intimacy with his wife.

Albert Sydney Johnson is claimed by some to have been the Robert E. Lee of the Southwest, yet I doubt whether he showed any more perseverance or force of character than Pemberton in defending Vicksburg. The romantic nature of Southern writers leads them to suppose from the circumstances of a death like Johnson's that his career, had he been allowed to live, would have been something immense. We only know that he made his mistake like the rest of them, and lost his life, and his fame will only be kept alive by the enormous concussion of Shiloh.

Few of the men whom I have mentioned possessed the capacities truly called statesmanship. A statesman is a man of thinking and laboring faculty, with the knowledge to have his principles sure from the start and the policy to get them full play in affairs. Regarded in this light, I think that perhaps Edward Livingston was the greatest statesman of the Southwest.

Swindling the Bald-Heads.

Danville (Ill.,) Special to Chicago Tribune.

The latest and a very neat swindling operation has just come to light in this city. The confidence operator in this instance was an oily-tongued individual of good address, and represented himself to be the agent or general manager of a corporation located in New York, the owners of a patent hair restorative that would make the hair grow on the baldest pate. He soon learned of the baldest members of the bar, and other influential citizens similarly unfortunate, and with insinuating grace he soon won their confidence. On the most bald individuals he did not want any money down, nor until they were satisfied of the truthfulness of his statements. He would leave two bottles of the "wonderful" with them, provided they would sign a contract to pay him $50 when a luxuriant growth of hair was the result of the application of the elixir. And if the contrary was he result, then they were to pay nothing. This worked fair and square and they signed. The next move, the dealer in the "wonderful" would approach other citizens equally high in standing, but less bald, showing his contracts with their more bald friends, and say to them: "I can make the hair grow on your heads as easily as on theirs, but you are not so bald. It will not take as much of the elixir, and I can do it for $5 or $10"—according to how he thought his victims would pay—"providing you will pay down. But if you want it on time, on a similar contract, I can't afford to do it for less than $50." The bait took, was swallowed, hook and all, and, after a few days' sojourn in our city, the slick one departed for other fields and pastures green with $200 or $300 ahead. He is still reaping rich harvests elsewhere, as his little game is with persons who, after they discover they have been taken in, do not say anything about it, but endeavor to keep the matter to themselves.

Congressional Humorists.

Washington Letter to New York World.

Mr. S. S. Cox by his work on the apportionment bill last winter won high praise, and succeeded in convincing the public of the fact, which it is always loath to believe, that a humorist can be a hard and able worker as well.

Another member of the House who possesses wit and wisdom is John Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, nephew of John Randolph, of Roanoke. He has always had the reputation in Virginia of being an inimitable raconteur, but he judiciously hid his light under a bushel for a time after coming to Washington. He had been preceded by a great reputation as the ablest constitutional lawyer of his State, and at once took rank with the first intellects in the House of Representatives. But one night, at a dinner party, Mr. Tucker "let himself out" and awoke the next morning to find himself famous. Mr. Tucker is wisely witty, he is not funny with all persons at all times, and he comes down like an avalanche on the man who presumes to be familiar with the wit because he is familiar with the witticism.

John Goode, of Virginia also, until lately a member, had a vein of solemn humor and was said to be one of the few men who could make the present Senator from Michigan, O. D. Conger, realize that the floor of Congress was not a circus ring. Mr. Goode is a rock of common sense, and he had a way of calling the attention of the House to the business of the day that was utterly ruinous to Mr. Conger's amateur minstrel performance.

Sarah Bernhardt's Ghastly Bargain.

From the London World, February 22.

A queer lawsuit is in store for the Parisians. Some two years ago Sarah Bernhardt, the "grrrande artiste" and universal genius, took it into her head to be photographed reclining at full length in the famous ebony coffin, padded with white satin, about which we have heard so much. The photographer, Melandri, undertook to satisfy the lady's caprice, and obtained some excellent proofs, Sarah having simulated to perfection the stillness of death. Thereupon, Dona Sol said to Melandri, "I will make a bargain with you. Swear to me that you will not sell any of these photographs until after my death." "After your death?" * * * "Oh, it will happen sooner than you expect. I promise you to die within a year from now. I am not joking. I have a presentiment, and my presentiments never deceive me. Furthermore, at the end of the year, if I am still in this world, I authorize you to sell as many of the photographs as you please. Melandri consented to this strange contract and executed faithfully his part of the bargain; but Sarah, happily for her admirers, neglected to keep her promise. Melandri wrote to Sarah while she was at New York, reminding her that she had no longer a right to behold the light of the sun. "Patience," telegraphed Sarah; "at end of American engagement will fulfil engagement with you." Melandri waited; but when Sarah returned from Russia a few days ago he again reminded Dona Sol that she had no right to behold the light of the sun. "Patience," wrote Sarah once more; "I have promised to create three new pieces at Paris; after that you can sell the photographs." But Melandri's stock of patience is exhausted and he has consequently referred his case to the Tribunal of Commerce of Paris.

VESUVIUS VISITED.

The Railway Up the Mountain—A Rough Scramble.

From Tinsley's Magazine.

After somewhat more than half an hour's ride over a howling wilderness, we reached the foot of the cone, and the lower station of the Ferrovia Funicalore di Vesovo, or Vesuvian Rope Railway. We dismounted here, leaving our horses in charge of the custodian of what seemed to be a wooden annex to the modern whitewashed railway station; and passing over in silence a suggestion from a hairy ragamuffin that he should drag me up the cone with his strap for the small sum of six francs, I began to ascent forthwith. It was a weary climb enough from the lower to the upper station of the railway, but fortunately, not a long one, the ascent of somewhat more than a thousand feet being accomplished in about an hour's time.

The superiority of the Superior Station of the Funicular Railway lies wholly in its elevation above sea level. The edifice is nothing more than a wooden shanty—a mere tabernacle run up in a style sufficiently enduring to last until the next eruption has brushed the Funicular Railroad off the face of the mountain. The railroad itself is of very peculiar construction. The line is a double one; but the carriages, of which there are two—one ascending while the other descends—run each on a single rail raised above a foot from the bed of the road on a massive sleeper. The vehicle is steadied by a series of guide wheels, which, mounted on peculiar curved arms projecting horizontally from the lower part of the frame-work, press firmly against small secondary rails fixed to the sides of the sleeper. An endless wire rope working over large pulleys at the upper and lower stations is fixed to each carriage; and, the rope being set in motion by a stationary engine below, one carriage mounts while the other descends the steep gradient of more than thirty degrees. "Carpe diem" is naturally the maxim of the Vesuvius Railway Company. "Let us cut down expenses to the lowest figure, and squeeze as much money as we can to-day from tourists and students of nature, for to-morrow the mountain may be on the rampage." Such language as this, no doubt, is held by the chairman of the company, when a shareholder ventures to suggest a more liberal expenditure on permanent way or a reduction of the exorbitant fares.

Five minutes from the upper station, along a rugged path, flanked by walls of rough scoriæ, and the top of the mountain, hidden until now by the slope of the cone, came suddenly into view, a dense cloud of white smoke issuing from the crater, accompanied by intermittent discharges of black ashes and cinders. A few paces more, and, passing over a low brow at the summit of the great cone, we find ourselves in front of a small hut of roughly-thrown-together lava blocks.

The character of the prospect, looking from this hut toward the smoking crater, might be best summed up in the one word "infernal." A small plateau or shallow basin, less than fifty yards in width, lay before us, covered with a rough crest of sulphur, whose brilliant tints of yellow and orange and green were beautiful with a reptilian beauty. Imagine a huge frog skin stretched over a rough surface some fifty yards wide, and you have an almost perfect picture of this little basin. At its farther edge rose the final cone of Vesuvius, a steep mound of black clinkers, some fifty feet high, like the cinder heaps around a great ironworks. From its mouth rose a thick column of light-colored smoke, and at intervals of a few seconds a deep soft roar was heard like the rushing of distant waters, and a gush of ashes and dark cinder lumps shot up some hundreds of feet into the air, with a speed gradually decreasing till they reached their culminating point, where they hovered for a moment before they went swooping downward into the crater once more.

After a little while we went across this little plateau for the final cone. It was a strange sensation to feel the treacherous floor of reeking sulphur crunch beneath one's feet in the deep silence of the mountain top—a silence broken only at regular intervals by the roar of each discharge from the crater and the rustling of the lighter cinders as, carried by the wind, they fell on the outer circle of the cone. Walking over the furrowed and fissured field of crisp sulphur here called up in the memory recollections of tramps across Swiss glaciers at daybreak, before the frost crystals have begun to melt beneath the sun, but the crunch of the footfalls was perhaps the only link connecting the actual picture with the one stirred up in the memory.

The last ten minutes' work up in the steep slope of loose clinkers was more fatiguing than all that had gone before. The sulphur fumes curling up from every crevice between the cinders grew stronger as we went on, taking away our breath, and causing us to halt and cough spasmodically every half dozen steps we made. Added to the reek of the sulphur was the unpleasant heat of the ground beneath our feet, enough to scorch the soles of our boots, and to become absolutely painful when one happened to sink to his ankles in the cinders. Measured with a protractor on the sharp profile of an excellent photograph bought in Naples the following day, I found the angle of inclination here was fully thirty-four degrees, a slope only a few degrees less than that which Humboldt, in his account of the Peak of Teneriffe, points out as being quite impracticable on firm, smooth ground without the cutting of steps. But our feet, bedding themselves in the shifting clinkers, which slid under our weight with a metallic tinkle, cut their own steps as we hurried up, making a spurt to get over the business quickly and emerge into the pure air once more. We could not get right up to the brink of the crater. The stifling smoke was too much for us. Curling over the edge, it crept some feet along the slopes and held us there at bay; but even if we had been able to hang over the treacherous crumbling rim, there could have been nothing to see in the cavity of the crater itself but more smoke. So we stood gasping about six feet below the brink, admiring the grand discharges of flaming red cinders popping up some hundreds of feet into the air and falling back again softly as Roman candles. Now and then a large lump of cinder would tumble back over the edge and roll to our feet, or shoot out beyond us, and set us dodging here and there, or absurdly ducking our heads and shrugging our shoulders, as if that could have made the blow lighter when it came.

Some time afterward we turned our backs on the crater and retired in rather disorderly fashion, coughing and sliding and stumbling down the scorching hot cinder cone until we reached the lava rampart which bounds the small sulphur plateau on the right. Here, breathing freely once more, we sat down and enjoyed the spacious prospect of land and sea beneath us, or perhaps I should say I, and not we, enjoyed it, since Mr. Ruskin will not hear of an uncultivated peasantry having an eye for the beautiful in landscape.

All for Fashion.

From the New York Times.

The death, scarcely noticed, occurred in England lately of a lady who was in her day the nine days' talk of London, and indeed of the country at large. A former Marquis of Londonderry married secondly, late in life, a great heiress of despotic desposition, who became a prominent leader in the fashionable world of London, and dispensed magnificent hospitality—albeit her husband became so deeply involved that her splendid mansion, Holdernesse House, was notoriously the scene of the Sheriff's officers being present in livery at a grand entertainment. Her eldest daughter married a duke, another married an earl, and the third, lady Adelaide, was doubtless destined by her mother to form an equally desirable match from a managing mamma's point of view, but Lady Londonderry counted without her daughter. One day fashionable London was electrified by the news that Lady Adelaide Vane had disappeared, and that her brother's tutor, Mr. Law, was also missing. This was not long after the elopement of the famous Lady Jersey's daughter with a Captain of Dragoons, son of a lawyer, had brought consternation on "society," the union of this pair at Gretna Green being the last of any note welded by the famous blacksmith. The story went that at the time Lady Londonderry, a rival grande dame, was the first to condole with "poor, dear Lady Jersey," and that en revanche Lady Jersey lost no time in returning the compliment when the dreadful catastrophe at Holdernesse House became known. It may be added that both of these marriages turned out quite as well as those more formally made. Capt. Ibbetson had a very respectable career in the army, and Mr. Law became an estimable clergyman, so that it was a case in both instances of "all's well that end's well." It was perfectly understood that if these ladies had not helped themselves to husbands they would have had no chance whatever of those of their own choosing, unless they had entirely fallen in with the views of mamma.

Its Work in Strathroy.

It often happens that the opinion of an experienced man, an expert, if we so call him, conveys greater force than an aggregation of outside, uneducated testimony. And then, too, personal experience or observation is so much more convincing than mere assertion. Trained to habits of analysis and keenest accuracy, and, from the very nature of their daily occupation, given to the most incisive criticism of anything of a proprietary nature, chemists, as a class, hesitate very long before indorsing anything of a remedial nature whose virtues have been announced through the public press. St. Jacobs Oil, however, is so universally successful and so unvaryingly accomplishes all that it promises that the able chemist, W. J. Dyas, Esq., of Medical Hall, Strathroy, Ont., sends, with his friendly recommendation, the following from David Harrison, Esq., 9th Conc., township of Caradoc: "Having suffered with inflammatory rheumatism since last July, and hearing of St. Jacobs Oil, I sent for a bottle of the article on the 15th of October. At that time I was confined to the house, and could not possibly get out of bed without assistance. After four applications of the oil the pain ceased entirely, and I was able to go about Strathroy in less than a week. I cannot give too much praise to St. Jacobs Oil for what it has done for me, and I believe it to be a most reliable remedy in rheumatism. Its wonderful efficacy should be brought to the knowledge of everybody."

All business or news letters or telegrams should be addressed: POST-DISPATCH,
515 and 517 Market street.

Mr. Conkling's letter of declination should be published for the enlightenment of the little politicians who never refuse anything.

Perhaps Gen. Grant would accept the Associate Justiceship. He isn't much of a lawyer, but he would make a personal sacrifice at any time to keep a big public office from going begging.

If Jay Gould captures the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, perhaps he will stop the unjust discrimination against St. Louis in the matter of Southeastern freights. It is understood that Jay is devoted to our town.

The two leading jewelry houses of this city have become involved in hostilities which recall the good old days of the railroad wars. As soon as an oil painting of Washington crossing the Delaware is given away with each spoon sold we propose to make our purchases.

Mr. Merrell, the City Treasurer, may try to keep the records of his office profoundly secret, but the tax-payers are on the trail of the barnacles all the same. They propose to know what they are paying for the luxury of a Municipal Government which neither keeps the streets clean, paves them or provides sufficient protection in any quarter.

Gov. Crittenden, who is pushing the scheme to call the Legislature together and gerrymander the State in the interest of the Democratic party, is keeping a tally of the sentiments of the State press on the question. He has a balance of about six weekly papers on his side at this writing. The Post-Dispatch, we are proud to observe, heads the opposition column.

A little band of ancient Greenback priests will assemble in solemn conclave in this city to-day. The sacred coal of rag-moneyism, now almost extinct, will be placed upon the altar and vigorously blown, but it is doubtful whether even a feeble flame will be produced. The officiating gentlemen are, however, very much encouraged by the reports of floods and human distress along the Lower Mississippi.

The city legislators have heard the voice of the people clamoring for the removal of the municipal barnacles. In the City Council last night an ordinance providing for the abolition of the office of Park Commissioner was ordered to be engrossed. The ordinance proposes to tra[illegible] Mr. Weigel's duties to the President [illegible] the Board of Public Improvements, thereby saving the city $4,800 per year. A little doubling-up of this kind is what the people demand now. Retrenchment is the mot d'ordre.

It is seldom that a genuinely public-spirited man like Mr. Merrill, of Gwinnett, Georgia, is encountered in this vale of tears. He hung himself last week after publicly acknowledging that he was responsible for the bad weather and short crops in his section of the country. If this sort of thing should become epidemic, and our tax-dodgers, who are responsible for our bad streets, would remove themselves in about a hundred and twenty thousand fits of remorse, coffins would become a speculative security.

The "Apostle Paul," a well-known "crank," rose in the Senate gallery yesterday and created a marked sensation by applauding the dreary Dawes, who was at the time in the throes of a speech on the Chinese question. It was the first time that Dawes was ever greeted by the clapping of hands in his life, and his first impulse was to dodge under a desk to avoid what he supposed to be the falling of the roof tiles. The insanity of the "Apostle Paul" being clearly established by this act, he will probably be sent to an asylum without the expense of an inquest.

The Rev. George Peake, of the Leavitt Street Congregational Church, Chicago, is in trouble with his pew-renters because he has been in the habit of referring occasionally to his deacons as thieves, liars, swindlers and cut-throats in business. It is customary for people throughout the country who have been dealing in "futures" to refer to the average Chicago business man in terms of this character without regard to his religious predilections, but it is not good taste for a clerical broker and dealer in futures to thus characterize his customers. We are compelled to frown upon the Rev. Mr. Peake.

Last summer, just after the shooting of President Garfield, suggestions of every kind rolled into the White House. Delicacies were forwarded by the car-load. Nearly everybody had something to offer to hasten the recovery of the wounded Chief. If the President had lived these philanthropists would have expected official favors. As he died they are now besieging Congress with claims. At the head of the gang of cormorants is one Jennings, a refrigerator man who advertised his cooling apparatus for weeks at the White House. He wants $5,000. The disreputable gang ought to be dispersed by the Capitol police.

The [illegible] has been work- [illegible] onument to [illegible] After three months' collecting, forty-seven dollars was found to be the total amount of appreciation entertained in his native land for a man whom Longfellow rated as one of the foremost American poets. Probably, however, the people along the South Atlantic Coast are not aware that there is other material for headboards than pine slabs. Forty-seven dollars' worth of puncheons would make an elegant frame sarcophagus over the resting-place of a man whom South Carolina delights to honor.

The Cairo Short Line now ends at Eldorado, Ill., a short distance from Shawneetown. At Shawneetown the Ohio River has a rock bottom. A bridge at that point could easily be built. If that road could be built via Shawneetown, through Princeton, Ky., to Nashville, some fifty to seventy-five miles would be saved over the route via Evansville. How long will the St. Louis merchants refrain from helping themselves when they can have the Cairo Short Line extended and thereby save the trade of the Southeast?

The Rev. Gaston de Rohan has gone meekly and tearfully to the Missouri Penitentiary, declaring mildly that he does not understand how he could have been so wicked as to escape from that model institution. He fervently states that he will never do it again, and that it is his conscience much more than the rigors of the law which troubles him. This gaudy swindler is a cosmopolitan jail-bird. He has been in confinement in every quarter of the world, and he could give a valuable course of lectures on prison discipline illustrated by his personal experience in France, Spain, Holland, England, Germany, Mexico, Canada and the United States. He is, in short, a thief to be proud of, and St. Louis in a measure owns him.

Mr. Pendleton was not in the Senate chamber when the vote was taken on the confirmation of Mr. Conkling, but he has intimated that his voice would have been against him. Yet it is remembered over in Ohio that Mr. Pendleton voted to confirm Stanley Matthews, one of the chief manipulators of the thieving scheme that made Mr. Hayes President in 1876. Referring to the matter the Cleveland Plaindealer says: "Mr. Conkling was manly in his opposition to the Democracy in 1876, but Stanley Matthews went South as a 'visiting statesman,' was one of the projectors of the many frauds perpetrated and one of their most earnest defenders before the Electoral Commission and has been credited as being the master of the notorious Joe Bradley." Mr. Pendleton's devotion to Matthews will cause him some embarrassment the next time he sticks his nose into a National Democratic convention.

The journeymen painters of the city are striving for an advance of wages and are endeavoring to enforce their demands by the ancient method known as a "strike." We know nothing of the controversy beyond the statement of the men that they are unable to support themselves and their families on the wages at present paid. Some of the employers, who decline to accede to the demands of the strikers, have appealed to the police authorities for details of patrolmen to protect their non-striking workmen. The "strikers" are indignant about this. They claim that they have not attempted to intimidate their brother workmen and that they have at no time resorted to violence. They disclaim any intention of the kind. It is to be hoped they will adhere to their platform of moral suasion, for in no other way can they win the sympathy and respect of the public. The right of workingmen to organize for protection and the maintenance of just rates of wages is conceded by every fair-minded citizen, but when force and threats are invoked to compel employers to accede to demands, and when violence is used against men who are willing to work, the spirit of the mob is disclosed, and society, for its own protection, is compelled to oppose. If the painters of St. Louis have a good cause let them appeal in a quiet, manly way to the sense of justice, which must abide with all employers, and to the intelligence which rights wrongs in all well-ordered communities.

It is the proud boast of the Ohio town of Oberlin that it was founded upon a moral principle built of ideas and governed by the consciousness of rectitude. During the war and before, it was a hot-bed, a forcing-house of Abolition. It was here that the first colored school was started; it was here that the great underground railway from Dixie's Land had its Northern terminus. It was here that many of the thoughts were forged and welded which were subsequently hurled against armed treason, although it must be admitted that the draft was very unpopular in Oberlin and the town did a good deal more thinking than shooting at Secession. With such a record and among such a people it does not require a nimble fancy to picture the feeling of the community when it was whispered quite recently that a wicked and defiant druggist was selling whisky to the backsliding brethren of the town. Nineteen-twentieths of the people of Oberlin have sworn off, and they mean to see to it that the other twentieth will have to work for the soothing cocktail before assimilating it. Videttes were posted in the drug store, and moral influences brought to bear on Mr. Bronson, the druggist. When a man came in and handed over a prescription calling for two fluid ounces of Bourbon whiskey he had to quail before the outraged eyes of two Oberlin scouts as he drank the medicine. Naturally Mr. Bronson's sales fell off and he removed the chairs which the scouts were in the habit of using, making them stand up while on duty. This maneuver was met by a supply of camp-stools sent in by the friends of temperance. Mr. Bronson then threw the sentinels out of his store and kicked the [illegible]p-stools off the premises. The Mayor at once took a hand and swore in thirty prominent citizens as deputy marshals, one of whom is always on deck at the druggist's, armed with a club, to allay any disturbance which may arise. In the meantime, Bronson is suing the prominent citizens for heavy damages, and the standard of intemperance still floats over this stronghold of sin. The leaguer of virtue is being brought more and more closely around it, however, and in all probability Bronson will eventually be laid out.

The honey bee and whisky are the pioneers of civilization in America and Australia. They are both to be found a little in advance of the white frontier in both countries. Hitherto the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico and Arizona have been peaceable and industrious, minding their own business thoroughly and occasionally giving the Apaches a severe drubbing by way of illustrating the moral of minding one's own business. They are a peculiar people, related to the civilized tribes of New Mexico rather than to the savages of the plains, and they have furnished ethnologists with many a key to the problem of American archæology. Alcohol has at last got into the Pueblos, however, and they are now involved in war with the New Mexican whites, a fight beginning with a drunken brawl leading up to a pitched battle in which the Caucasian element was routed with heavy loss. The Pueblos will, of course, share the fate of the other Indians, but it is a pity that these happy and peaceful communities must be broken up. They did no harm to any one before the white traders poisoned them with whisky; they are self-supporting, in a measure civilized, and they have a history and a well-defined religion. Unfortunately for them they are a vicarious sacrifice for our wrong-doing.

Congressman Cox is unfortunate at the present session. Every time he gets up somebody knocks him down.—[Cincinnati Times-Star.

Mr. Cox is the smallest man in the House and the big bullies probably take liberties with him.

A CARD.

From the E. Jaccard Jewelry Company.

We know that the public, as a rule, take but little interest in matters which may seem merely to involve questions of rivalry in trade, but where it appears that the public is to be benefited the interest is increased. A house in this city bearing a similar name to our own in its great anxiety to secure business has seen fit to pursue methods which are at variance with our ideas of a proper regard either for the amenities of trade or of questions of fact. In view of statements which had been made by this firm that no house in America was selling goods as cheap as they, our company decided to meet all such general statements by specific ones. We therefore advertised our price as manufacturers of sterling silverware, on spoons and forks, to be $1 50 per ounce by actual weight. This produced the result we expected by calling from that firm a reply, in which the following appeared: "We offer to-day and until further notice, pure solid sterling silver spoons and forks at $1 35 per ounce, engraving included, and will be weighed before the purchaser," and the following statement was also made: "That the ware offered was less than the importer's cost of production, etc." We then prepared another advertisement (the one appearing this morning) which was taken to the office of the Republican at 9 o'clock last evening, in which we reduced our price to $1 25 per ounce. At 11 o'clock we obtained a proof of the advertisement and took it to the Globe-Democrat at 11:30. A member of the firm alluded to was there at that hour, having been duly informed by a man sent there by him of our movements, and, as we learn from one of the managers of the Globe, he was denied by him access, and very properly of course, to our matters. Nevertheless he succeeded, either through the office of the Globe or of the Republican, by means which we would regard as unworthy, in obtaining a knowledge of our affairs, and although he had ordered his own advertisement for the papers, he had the change made from $1 35 down to $1 20 per ounce. This will account for the fact that we are made to appear in to-day's paper as a higher-priced house than the one who pursues such questionable methods. We have succeeded in our purpose of uncovering this claim, and now we intend to disclose the hollowness of others.

Very respectfully,
E. Jaccard Jewelry Co.,

A Greenbacker's Conundrum.

St. Louis, March 7, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My attention was called this evening to my lonesome condition in St. Louis—"as lonesome (you say) as a tarantula in the heart of the Libyan desert." Very significant. And if you had said that I was "as lonesome as St. Paul when he visited Ephesus" your illustration of my lonesomeness would have been sufficient to "point a moral or adorn a tale." In order to enable the sapient editor of the Post-Dispatch to do so I propose the following conundrum: Is there a sane man in the United States, if he possessed the power of making and issuing money for the transaction of his business and the payment of all his debts, that would execute a bond bearing interest for his debts, or execute his note, with or without interest, payable in another money? Should you answer that no man would be such a fool, then please inform your readers why the representatives of the Republican and Democratic parties, possessing the unquestionable right of making and issuing money for the payment of all debts public and private, in their management of the people's business, have issued bonds bearing interest and have issued notes payable in some other money? Are they lunatics or what?

If the editor of the Post-Dispatch will answer this conundrum, I will bless the day I visited St. Louis.

A Street Car Imposition.

St. Louis, March 7, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"Put your fare in the box on entering the car."

This is the placard stuck up in the cars of the Gravois road, as a rule, I suppose, to be complied with by the passengers. I got on at the western terminus, and did as requested, but on getting to the car stables the car standing went out ahead, and when I inquired about changing cars and told the driver that I had put my fare in the box, I was told I would have to ride on that car or pay another fare. I drew his attention to the rule, and he replied that it was not right, but that he or they could not help it, which, of course, I acknowledged. I did not mind waiting for the next car, which I thought would be the one I was in, but instead of it they run two cars out of the stable, switched the car behind the one I was in ahead, and started for town according to time. Now if they want people to comply with their rules, why not transfer them in a case of that kind, or put up a notice not to put your fare in the box until you arrive at the stables, and not keep people waiting for three cars to start out ahead of the one that was waiting. There was a time when the Fifth street line would transfer passengers in the car waiting at the stable in the South End going to the "Wild Hunter's." Now, I ask, is this justice when a man does right?

[The law requires that the license shall be obtained from the Recorder's office. It is not strictly necessary that "both" parties shall appear before the Recorder. The acknowledgment of a notary as to the age qualification of "the lady" is sufficient. The law simply requires that applicants shall be of age, males twenty-one, females eighteen. The consent of parents or guardians for persons under age would be required. The license reads that such and such parties are above the limit of age prescribed by the law. The Central Council of the St. Louis Land League met at the office of Dr. Thomas O'Reilly last evening, the president, Dr. O'Reilly, in the chair.

The resignation of F. A. Drew was accepted and John Grogin was elected to take his place. A committee was appointed to organize leagues throughout the city. A committee composed of Dr. O'Reily, Father Tallon and Rev. George J. Betts was appointed to draft resolutions to be forwarded to Congress in relation to American citizens imprisoned in Ireland. The Council has invited D. R. Locke, (Petroleum V. Nasby) to lecture here in April. Nasby is an American who visited Ireland last summer and was converted to the gospel of Parnell.

THE BROADWAY BANK.

Another Chapter in the History of the Broken Banks.

$300,000 of the Depositors' Money Sunk in This Institution.

The Story of Bank Management in St. Louis.

A Tale Involving Shame, Disgrace, Suicide, Ruin and Fraud.

The collapse of the Broadway Bank in May, 1879, was attended with developments of such a remarkable character that it ranks pre-eminent among the memorial tablets of directory mismanagement of St. Louis trust funds. The past few years closed over the graves of six or seven rotten institutions sailing under the ironical title of saving banks. The doors of the Central had not long been shut when the Butchers' and Drovers' suspended; but it was thought that with the latter the list of failures in banking business here had closed. Confidence in the Broadway establishment was so firmly fixed that the School Board appointed its cashier treasurer and the school funds were deposited in its vaults. Late into one night of the spring of 1879, however, the directors sat discussing a situation negligence and mismanagement had mainly brought about, and it was resolved to meet the depositors and the public the following day with the announcement of an assignment for the benefit of creditors to John Dierberger. Broadway was in a state of ferment as soon as the morning papers met the gaze of the duped depositors. The doors of the bank were surrounded and the usual stories of fraud and swindling were passed from lip to lip, supplemented with anathemas hurled at the directors and the cashier. The bank had been established in 1869 by J. Phil Krieger, Sr., an old German citizen, who ran a saloon on Fifth street. The capital stock was placed at $300,000, but it was reduced to $150,000 under operation of the law of 1877. It did a fair business among the commission merchants and the horse and mule traders along Broadway. When the crash came it was officered as follows: President, J. P. Krieger, Sr.; Vice-President, H. B. Poorman; Cashier, J. Phil Krieger, Jr.; Directors: L. S. Bargen, John F. Hackmann, H. Houghton, J. Johnson, Jas. Lightholder, Geo. Lang, Morris Lyons, John Rohan, August Rode, Frederick Zelle and Hy. Obermoeller. The Post-Dispatch had occasion a few days since to illustrate the composite character of an average directory managing financial trusts.

WHICH THEIR OWN IGNORANCE,

THE CRAZE OF MEN

of small mental caliber to assume positions of this character has been gratified in St. Louis at the cost of the hard earnings of thousands of frugal people. Legislation has attempted to fasten some measure of responsibility upon bank directors of late years, but no method has yet been adopted to prevent men who know nothing about financial business from stepping into the chairs which invite the confidence and the money of the struggling trader and artisan.

The Broadway directors declined to divulge for many days any details of the bank's condition. Rumors were flying thick and fast implicating all the officers of the institution, but many weeks elapsed ere the solid facts were reached, together with the causes leading directly to the failure. The earliest statement prior to the official report to court was to the effect that the deposits had fallen off to the extent of $130,000 in one month. After a time the following statement was rendered:

ASSETS.

Exchange	$228,815 83
Bills receivable	384,412 19
Real estate	15,655 13
Real estate loans	74,415 82
Due from banks	33,174 25
Cash	52,933 52
Total	$794,513 74

LIABILITIES.

Demand deposits	$308,551.74
Time deposits	222,128.05
Due banks	27,891.59
Balance	235,942.36
Total,	$794,513.74

After the directors had relieved themselves by shifting the blame and responsibility for the failure from the shoulders of one to the other, the facts were brought out, and the transactions of the cashier with Meyer Goldsoll, involving loans without security to the extent of hundreds of thousands, were exposed to light. Young Krieger had suffered himself to a certain degree to be made a scapegoat for the loose transactions to which certain of the directors were parties in full and guilty knowledge. But he played fast and loose himself with the bank's affairs, and his infatuation for an extravagant young woman led him into the wildest excesses and diverted his attention from business. The current of popular indignation was strong against him, and to escape personal injury he took refuge behind the bars of the City Jail. Shame and disgrace, added to bitter remorse, brought him at length to the grave of a suicide. It would be tedious to dwell at length upon the transactions sanctioned by this model directory, which led the institution to ruin. The course of the cashier, suicidal as it was, could have been stopped, and the loose dealings on the part of the bank checked by a vigilant, conscientious corps of managers. The Broadway went under because she was in the hands of a dishonest person and because her officers were recalcitrant to their trust.

THE HISTORY OF THIS BANK'S

liquidation may be told in a few words. In May, 1879, John Dierberger, as assignee under the deed executed by the bank directors, took hold of the concern. The indignant creditors at once moved for his removal. Two petitions were presented to court urging the appointment of Philip Stock, ex-Clerk of the Circuit Court. Mr. Dierberger found things too warm for him up at the "busted" bank and he gracefully tendered his resignation. Stock was ordered to give bond in the sum of $500,000. A few days later he came into court and asked leave to withdraw. J. M. Franciscus was then appointed assignee by Judge Boyle, and John F. Grady and John H. Dieckmann were appointed appraisers. On the 30th of June, 1879, after a few weeks' experience, Mr. Franciscus came into court and resigned. The following day John R. Lionberger, of the Third National Bank, was appointed assignee, and he chose to remain, giving bond in the sum of $650,000. In doing this Brother Lionberger was enabled to effect a little arrangement for his son-in-law John D. Davis, the attorney. The wreck has since been carefully guarded by the assignee and his son-in-law, backed by the moral and legal support of Judge Geo. A. Madill, ex-president of the ex-Democratic Association.

THESE GENTLEMEN

have been content to receive for their services, allowed from the assignee's expense account, $3,125 jointly. The son-in-law of the assignee for his own services, independent of other attorneys, has accepted $2,829 35, and $15 per month for office rent. Messrs. Withrow & Davis for legal services have received $397 01. F. E. Miltenberger, as an accountant, has received about $25 per month, and W. K. Spinney, $100 for special work. Assignee Lionberger himself has had $7,500 allowed on account of his services by order of court. James M. Franciscus was allowed $1,821 90 on account of his expenses and $500 for his services, which only lasted a few days, and John Dierberger was allowed $703 for his services. In dividends the assignee has paid out $257,285.36 as against $558,500 liabilities. The first dividend was 25 per cent, and $149,157 05 passed to the creditors at that ratio. Litigation has been pushed against both directors and stockholders on their liability established by law, and in every case where a judgment could be recovered the dollars have been gathered in. The assignee has rendered thirteen reports to court, the last of date February just closed, showing a balance on hand of $29,132 82. The first report extended from May to October, 1879, and the synopsis is as follows:

The disbursements from December, 1879, to date have amounted to $188,663 03, including payment of dividends Nos. 2 and 3. The assignee expects to pay another dividend of ten per cent, after which the final ceremonies will be performed over the Broadway corpse and the case in court closed.

The property of the bank was appraised by John H. Dieckmann and John F. Grady, and their appraisement was filed in June, 1879, showing the total valuation of $315,606 60. Of this sum about $45,000 was used by the depositors as offset against their indebtedness to the bank, leaving the actual assets $270,606 60. Mr. Lionberger, as assignee, has filed thirteen reports, showing a payment to the creditors of three dividends, the first of 25 per cent, the second 8 and the third 10, making a total of 43 per cent, on claims of about $625,000, making the total amount paid in dividends $267,353 28. The following abstract of receipts and disbursements has been furnished by the accountant:

Total cash receipts	$321,732 25

Total	$321,732 25

These accounts furnish a reflection on bank management in St. Louis. The Broadway crash carried with it a clear loss of $300,000 to the depositors.

CAUGHT IN A COLLISION.

Cost of a Spinal Column Charged up Against a Railroad.

A special jury is in attendance to-day before Judge Adams, summoned for the trial of the $10,000 damage suit Eliza T. Shepard against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. The lady was a passenger on the west-bound train to Kansas City November 25, 1880. A short distance from Pleasant Hill there was anything but a pleasant experience for the passengers. The company's servants were endeavoring to solve a problem that never has been solved yet, viz.: How two trains moving in opposite directions can pass each other on the same track. The effort was not a success on this occasion, and a collision ensued which scattered the passengers right and left. Mrs. Shepard, a lady of heavy proportions, was seriously hurt, and she alleges that the accident resulted in permanent injury to the lower portion of the spinal column, dislocating the coccyx. The sufferer alleges that her nervous system has been entirely unstrung and her health generally materially affected by the collision. The company moved before trial that Mrs. Shepard submit herself to a thorough medical examination; to which she demurred, alleging that the ordeal would be painful and cause aggravated sickness. Her attorney, Mr. L. Wilcox, poured a flood of depositions into court, and the company to-day will place an army of medical experts on the stand. The lady will undergo a private examination in course of trial if the court should so order. Mr. Andrews represents the Missouri Pacific, and the jury may expect to learn something about medical science and the nervous system before night closes in.

GOV. CRITTENDEN.

The Sale of Hannibal and St. Joe—Extra Session of the Legislature.

Gov. Crittenden was found this morning at the Southern, engaged in consultation over the raising of funds for the sufferers of Southeastern Missouri by the recent floods. A reporter of the Post-Dispatch inquired:

"Governor, what will you do in connection with the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad matter?"

"I am preparing to advertise the road for sale."

"What will you make the date of the sale?"

"I have not exactly decided, but it will be about six months from now."

"Has the road shown a disposition to compromise?"

"Neither to compromise nor to pay. In fact they seem to have entirely ignored the decision of the court and are proceeding as though nothing was expected of them."

"Have you determined whether you will call a special session of the Legislature?"

"No; I am waiting for some public indication. If a majority of the party appear to demand it, I shall proceed to call the Legislature. But I must have an undoubted expression of opinion. It will not do to convene the Legislature on a mere whim."

The Governor was interrupted here and taken down to the Merchants' Exchange.

ON THE RIALTO.

An Opinion Upon the February Wheat Deal.

Thompson's Correspondents---The Mutual Union---Odds and Ends.

The publication in yesterday's Post-Dispatch of the Billingsley & Nanson petition, asking for a settlement of the February wheat deal and the decision of the Call Board Committee in the matter brought that "cornered corner" once more prominently before the members, and this morning there was considerable discussion of the case. The general opinion appeared to be that the middle men had no recourse whatever for damages, and they must stand any loss they may have incurred by settling with their customers and paying them the profits before the deal was fully settled up. The facts as summed up by a prominent operator are as follows: "The middle men had the wheat sold at a high price and bought 3@[illegible]wer. The parties from whom they had it [illegible] did not deliver them the wheat; con[illegible]ently they could not deliver [illegible]y to the parties to whom they had it sold, and as the latter made no demand on the middle men for the wheat, but allowed their contracts to go by default, the middle men have no claim upon the longs. Now if a market value for the wheat could be established for the last day of the month at a price above the figures the middle men bought at, they probably could claim damages from the parties who were short to them, but as the month went out with sales at from $1 40 to $1 25, and as it would be difficult for any committee to fix the actual value of the wheat on the last day above $1 25, you can see that they cannot claim damages from the shorts. It is my opinion that the middle men must stand their loss."

INFORMATION AND MONEY WANTED.

Mr. C. L. Thompson, president of the St. Louis Board, is the recipient of more nonsensical communications than any other man in the city. People seem to think he has at his command all the information they wish, besides being the possessor of unlimited funds to help them to prosperity. Following are two letters received by Mr. T. that are samples of their kind. The first, from Ed. S. Boyce, Northboro, Ia., addressed to the President Board of Trade, St. Louis, reads: "There is a small amount of old crib lumber on the R. R. above this place, about 300 feet. If the same is for sale, what is the price? as I can find no one here that knows anything about it." The other, from Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Feb. 27, '82, P. O. Box 22: "Board of traid St Louis Jents Sirs I have Bought Buysness lots & Building on them for the Express purpose of doing Buysness for the Wabash St Louis & Pasific R. PROGRESS OF THE MUTUAL UNION.

The Mutual Union Telegraph Company is energetically pushing its lines to all important points. New offices are now open at Kansas City, Independence, Glasgow, Marshall, Mexico, Bowling Green and Louisiana, Mo., and to Indianapolis, Lafayette and Miller's in Indiana. The company have also in construction four fine new wires from New York that follow the turnpike road to Philadelphia, Wheeling, Columbus, Springfield, Mo., and Indianapolis, at latter point taking the Vandalia road, over which they have the right of way, to St. Louis. James Gamble, General Manager of the Mutual Union, has been in Kansas City for some time selecting a route to San Francisco. This route will be over the Kansas Pacific road, taking in Denver and Leadville. The line will be open to Omaha by July 1.

"ELEVATOR CORNER."

Just at the south end of the reporters' desk on 'Change is the "elevator corner," where all the elevator men congregate from 11 to 1 o'clock. It is one of the busiest spots on the floor. John Jackson, Major Slattery, the two Larimores, R. S. McCormick, Charley Isaacs, Hugh Rogers and others have always some one buttonholing them with endless inquiries as to grain they may have in the different elevators, and the patience shown by the elevator men in answering these questions is only equaled by that supposed to have been exercised by Job.

A LONDON LETTER.

A late London letter says: "The Australian wheat crop, gathered at the close of last year, is now in process of shipment. The yield is understood to be decidedly superior to the small crop of 1880, but it is not believed to be equal to that of 1879. With the existing large supplies buyers can well afford to operate cautiously and await the result of the Indian, Egyptian and Chilian harvests, the time for securing which is not so far distant. We must now expect, however, our own supplies to fall off considerably, as British farmers, out of a small crop, have been marketing their produce freely since the commencement of the season."

THE BULGE IN OATS.

Oats in this market have been run up to a high point, and St. Louis is now relatively higher than any other market in this country. The sharp advance was caused by an urgent demand from the South that came while the offerings of oats were small here. A few days ago large orders were received from Cairo, Ill., where the high water prevented grain from being received and shipped, and from many other points south the demand was unusually heavy. The effect of these high prices will, undoubtedly, be to attract oats in large quantities to this market, and as it seems probable that this demand will not keep up long, the consequence will be a large stock for which there will be no outlet.

E STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.

The Constant Battle of the Laboring Classes for Bare Subsistence.

Extraordinary Dangers and Hardships of Some Work.

Diseases Contracted and Injuries Sometimes Received.

The Lead Factories, Boiler Shops and Other Establishments.

Life one Constant Fight for the Necessities to Support It.

A faithful picture of the condition of the women who work in the large factories of St. Louis has been already given in the POST-DISPATCH. The details were startling enough to that class who know nothing of the way other people manage to exist, and who are accustomed to look at life through the rosiest of glasses.

The laboring men of the city, by which is meant all those who do manual labor, are also a fit class of study for this same class of people. Political economists have commented over and over again on the fact that civilization has improved the condition of all but the working class. Telegraphy, electricity, machinery, etc., have almost annihilated space and distance. Things which could not have been imagined possible fifty years ago are done rapidly and easily now by means of late inventions, and yet the condition of the workers and the length of hours of labor have not been changed in the least. It has been repeatedly shown by statistics that four-fifths of the population of the United States are laborers. And it is also a patent truth that Nearly every one of the vast number are compelled to work ten hours a day for six days of every week, simply to live. Nor do these toilers live in the real sense of the word. They are not the people who visit the theaters. The pleasures of the table are forbidden to them, for the necessary luxuries are too high to be in reach of the workingman's purse. Pleasure trips and excursions out of town in unseasonably hot weather are so far from them that it would not be rank incredulity on their part to believe that such things do not exist. A majority of this class of people in all countries

MARRY AND RAISE FAMILIES.

In what is the outlook brightened by this step? It means additional expense for rent, clothing and food, which signifies harder work or debt. It means living in the top stories of tenement houses, in small, crowded, badly ventilated rooms, where the danger from fire and other casualties is ever imminent. It means the bringing up of children without sufficient education to raise above the condition of their fathers. Children, in a majority of cases, as before, are compelled by sheer necessity to go out to work while yet too young, and forced to go to labor which is physically ruinous, the children being thus stunted in body and in mind. And finally, the laborer in a majority of cases sees old age coming on him without being able to make any provision for and in a large percentage of instances he sees a life where all has been work and no [illegible] for him without the surroundings make his exit decently comfortable. That prospect is discouraging nobody will deny, and the fact that the laboring classes are not more discontented can scarcely be explained.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter to-day made a round of several manufacturing establishments in the city, where large numbers of men are employed, in order to get an idea of the condition of things. The impressions are too vivid to be clearly reproduced. The intention, however, is not to find fault with employers. The idea is to show the struggle for life among the working classes, and to exemplify just what workmen have to do to keep body and soul together. Perhaps the most disagreeable form of employment in the city is that furnished in

THE WHITE LEAD FACTORIES.

A visit to a couple of them is sufficient to make almost any man think his condition fortunate in comparison with the employes of these places. Several white lead works are located in the city, the largest being the establishment of the Collier Company on Clark avenue. A more unhealthy avocation is not known to the medical profession, yet there are 500 men in St. Louis to-day who are directly connected with the white lead business as workmen. As the reporter walked through one of the factories, he noticed that all the men, especially those who were in close proximity to the vats, were pale-faced and hollow-eyed. One man who seemed to be very weak was accosted.

"You do not seem to be well?"

"No. In fact I have just returned from an attack of sickness."

"What was the nature of your sickness?"

"Oh, this terrible lead colic. This is the second attack I have had within a year. The doctor told me not to come back. He says that another attack may cause paralysis, but what can I do? I cannot get any other kind of work. I must make some money. My wife and two children are in want. This is the only place where I could get employment, so I was compelled to come back."

"Does the 'colic' you speak of cause much suffering?"

"I should say so," said the speaker, with a gesture of disgust. "Ask any of these men."

"Have they all had it?"

"Yes, most of them more than once. You know

WHAT AN EPILEPTIC FIT IS.

Well, the attack is much like that. The person who has it writhes and foams at the mouth and generally has all the horrible contortions which accompany a fit, only that in lead colic they last longer. These are followed by a sickness which sometimes lasts several weeks, and from which the sufferer gets up weak and pale, just as I am. My doctor says that another attack will produce stiffening of my joints and partial paralysis. Last time I tried to avoid the attack by drinking new milk and other things that we thought were good, but it was no use."

"What wages do you receive?"

"I am only a helper around these vats, and I get $1 75 per day. That is better than I would get for the same work in other parts of the house, where there is less danger of the colic. A man must support his family, and I am trying to do it, even if it kills me."

Other employes were spoken to, and many of them said that they had the terrible "lead colic," some of them more than twice. A middle-aged man said that he had been in the place five years, that when he first came he was hale and stout, but that now his back, knees and elbow joints were stiff, as an effect of

and he was not in fact able to do any work but the lightest. The real truth was that he was being kept and paid wages simply because he had become superannuated in the establishment.

Asked about his family, this man said: "Oh, yes, I have several children. My son, who is fourteen years of age, is working in another part of the factory. He wants to come in here, because he can get better wages, but I persuade him not to do it. He will, though, after a while. I hate to see him do so, but what can I do."

From the white lead manufactories a trip was taken through the boiler yards and foundries in the northern part of the city. Two or three of them were visited. The work in the foundries, on cold days, is not so disagreeable. In summer, however, it is almost unendurable. The heat and sparks are enough to drive a man [illegible] yet hundreds stand the blaze every year [illegible] the months that those whose wealth [illegible] flee the city, to avoid the scorching [illegible] which blow even in the elevated portions of the West End. The molders in stove foundries work in damp, cold and cheerless barns, and all of them complain that chronic rheumatism is sure to follow their work.

the noise and racket was such that no talking could be done while the work is in progress. At the noon recess the reporter walked in again and found a man seated on a pile of scrap iron, taking out of his dinner bucket pieces of cold meat and bread, on which to make his noonday repast. The terrible clatter of the numerous hammers had ceased, so that conversation was possible. The man was noticed to be very deaf, and on questioning about it he said:

"Why, all boiler-makers are more or less deaf. A good many of them that I know cannot hear at all. I am not as bad as that yet, you see. You come in here and stay an hour or two, and see if you do not go away with a singing in your ears which will last you for the rest of the day. Then just think of us, who are here every day for ten long hours. It makes us all deaf. It is not as bad as other things, though."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, the men who repair the boilers, chisel out the rivets and do that style of work. They are in a more dangerous line. If you go over to the shop you will find that many of them have lost one eye. The little sparks which fly from the iron strikes the eye and destroys the sight. Some of the men try to wear masks and spectacles, but they cannot work with them. We gave a ball a couple of weeks ago for a man

WHO HAD BECOME TOTALLY BLIND.

He lost his left eye about a year ago. Before Christmas he was working away underneath a boiler, when he felt a stinging pain in his right eye, and afterwards water running out. He soon found he could not see at all. A doctor was called, and it was seen that a splinter of iron had gone clean through the pupil, letting out the fluid inside and ruining the eye. The splinter when taken out was found to be not so big as the head of a pin, but it had blinded the man for life."

These men make from $1 50 per day upward. Their work is hard and exhausting, dirty in its nature and very dangerous. Nearly all of them have families to support. It is useless to describe the condition of things at the Vulcan and other furnaces and rolling mills in Carondelet and other parts of the city. The men are roasted almost to death during four months of the year. They are subjected to all the dangers which may always arise from boilers, machinery and an abundance of molten metal. The work is the severest drudgery. The pay is not at all large. Accidents are very frequent, as any reader of the daily papers is well aware.

THE CIGAR-MAKERS AND TOBACCO WORKERS

are another class who have a hard time. Most of the shops are badly ventilated, in fact, where there are large quantities of tobacco ventilation is impossible. Consumption and catarrh are the diseases which cut down the workers who are confined all day in such a terrible atmosphere.

Yet, although the pay is very small, it is a fact that until lately many of the cigar-makers had to take their pay in cigars, which they were compelled to sell around the saloons at whatever price they could get. They thus had a chance of being arrested for violating the revenue laws, were compelled to spend money to make the sales, thus lessening the profits, and were necessitated to find time to sell the cigars while at the same time attending to their work. The wages paid last year averaged from $1 25 to $2 per day for more than twelve hours' work. The custom of giving cigars in payment of wages has been nearly broken up by the late act of the Legislature, but still prevails to a considerable extent.

About the hardships of the bricklayers, plasterers, house carpenters and others of that class, it is needless to say anything. In fact, an examination into all classes showed that with rents at the figure they now are, and provisions away up, it was as much as any man could do, if he had steady work, to support his family in the plain necessities.

As the reporter rode home from one of the foundries on the front platform of a Fifth street car, he fell into a middle-aged man, about the vicissitudes of life. After some words were passed, the driver was asked if his work was not pretty hard.

"Well, it is," he said; "just about as hard as it could possibly be."

"What wages do you get?"

"About $1 60 per day."

"How do you live on that?"

"I'll tell you. I have a wife and six children. We live in two rooms on the third story. I work about seventeen hours Sunday and every day else. The time I am at home I am so tired that I sleep. I never have a chance to talk to my wife and children. Indeed, during the winter season I never see their faces by daylight."

"What rent do you pay?"

"Six dollars per month. So you will see just how much we have to live and clothe ourselves on. We do not get many dainties."

Here was a man who literally worked all his time—for what? To get just enough ragged clothes to cover his body, and not enough inferior food to stay his appetite. The great complaint among the laboring men is the length of hours they work. Many of them have to go to Carondelet, East St. Louis and distant parts of the city to work, so that many of them are practically doing twelve or even thirteen hours' hard labor every day.

WENDELL PHILLIPS

lectured upon the working classes in this city several years ago, and, commenting upon this subject, he spoke as follows:

"I should be far within bounds, if I said that twenty millions wake every morning, and spend their waking hours—the whole of them—in industrious and faithful toil, merely to support the body. That is no exaggeration, you will certainly allow. The man that rises between six and seven to go to a New England mill, and leaves it perhaps at seven in the evening, or reaches home at seven, and has to spend another hour in preparing for to-morrow, and the man out here on the prairies that rises in the same way—no matter how fertile your soil—it is no exaggeration to say that, taking the average of the States, one-half of our Christendom population simply exists to keep their body alive. Well, now, in the nineteenth century of Christendom, I proclaim that an infamous result. I affirm that the working masses have a right to indict the civilization that produces it. No matter what may be your theory of finance, no matter what may be your criticism of shiftlessness, indolence, lack of foresight, vice—combine them all—it never could have been supposed that in the nineteenth century the wit of man would have remained so dull and stagnant that such a statement could be truthfully made.

NOW WHY IS IT

that if the laboring class be four-fifths of society, the drunkenness of the laboring class is ninety-nine one-hundreths? Why is it that the workingmen are the seed-plots? Why? Because, when a man has spent twelve hours in toil merely to sustain his body, simply for his bread. At night, as it closes in, there is no elasticity of thought, no buoyancy of physical power, no healthful wakefulness that would lead him to share an intellectual pleasure. He cannot sit down to read; he cannot amuse himself with the higher powers of his nature. Sleep or some gross physical stimulus is the only thing available to him, and he sinks into its arms as his only refuge from the painful contemplation of the dread routine of a daily life like that. No man has a right to blame him. The society that condemned him to toil in all his waking hours handed him over to his lower appetites, food for their triumph, and any man accustomed to deal with that great cancer in city life which makes demagoguism possible knows that it is only to be dealt with by lifting these large masses into the capacities of higher pleasures, more intelligent amusements and grander opportunity, leisure and its results."

GUERNSEY, JONES & CO.,

500 NORTH FOURTH STREET.

THE MODERN ELDORADO.

Mexican Railways, Mexican Mines and Other Aztec Bonanzas.

Hon. A. C. Hunt, ex-Governor of Colorado, but more recently solicitor of the Mexican National Railway, arrived from Monterey, Mexico, this morning, and registered at the Southern. He is accompanied by his private secretary, R. A. Crespi, Mrs. A. W. Wilcox, Mrs. Johns and children, and servants. In fact, the Governor's retinue is quite extensive, but he is himself as unobtrusive and unpretentious as a backwoods farmer. When a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH called this morning, Gov. Hunt was seated before a blazing fire endeavoring to take a mental inventory of his valises, baskets and handbags. The Governor said:

"We encountered considerable water along the Iron Mountain road, but we came in on time. The whole southeastern part of your State seems to be flooded."

"What is the present condition of affairs in Mexico?"

"The Government of the Republic is much stronger than the outside world imagines, and it is able and prompt in the suppression of mobs. The trouble is that every cow-boy's difficulty is heralded to the world as a new rebellion, and the country begins to think that Mexico is in a constant state of upheaval. The other day a dozen drunken bandits from the border went into Chihuahua and seized Gov. Terrazas, whom they undertook to hold for ransom, but within two days the Government had every man engaged in the affair, and Gov. Terrazas was uninjured. Yet that went abroad as a fresh rebellion. There are only two recognized classes in Mexico—the extremely rich and the extremely poor. The intervening race live by their wits—gamble, horse-race, deal in stock, steal and plunder. It is that class that the Government is just now looking after."

"Is the Mexican National progressing very rapidly?"

"No, but it is being constructed steadily and will eventually be a great railroad. It crosses the Republic from the East to West, and the Mexican Central from North to South."

"Is your present visit here connected with that road?"

"No, I resigned my position several months ago, and am now organizing the Rio Grande and Pecos Railway and Telegraph Company, which was incorporated last month by J. W. Throckmorton, Albert W. Wilcox and myself."

"What are the termini of the proposed road?"

"The principal business of the company will be established at Laredo, Webb county, Tex. It is proposed to start from the city of Brownsville, Cameron county, and proceed up the east side of the Rio Grande River, through Cameron and Hidalgo counties, to Rio Grande City, in Star county, and thence up the valley to Carrizo, Zapato county, and thence to Laredo. Then we connect Laredo with a vast coal field thirty miles distant, and develop the greatest coal mines in the world, which are now putting out over 100 tons daily of the best quality of Cannel, equal to that mined in quantity."

"Is the demand for coal extensive in that country?"

"A ready sale is found in Laredo for all this coal, which is being delivered for the use of the railways, and at Fort McIntosh at $8 per ton of 2,000 pounds. There is a large demand for coal at Point Isabel from steamships on the Gulf, which will pay on transportation at least two cents a ton per mile. The International and Great Northern Railway traverses a country which for over 300 miles is destitute of fuel and dependent solely on mesquite wood, known to be very injurious to flues and all iron that the acids come in contact with. This railway must depend upon this coal for fuel, as also for the seventy-five miles down the Mexico side of the Rio Grande. Besides, the Texas Mexican Railway, for a distance of 167 miles to Corpus Christi, and the Mexican National, for 250 miles, will also be dependent solely on these coal mines, which are owned by our company."

"Who constitute the company?"

"The board of directors consists of Alva Adams, Jerome B. Chaffee, J. W. Throckmorton, Santos Benavides, Wilson Waddingham, H. L. Cake, Ysidore Guzman, Santiago Lauchez and myself. The corporation will be entitled to receive from the State of Texas, upon completion of a section of ten miles or more of its road, sixteen sections of land of 640 acres each for every mile of its road so completed and put in good running order; it also has the right to construct and operate its own telegraph line along its railway tracks."

"What is the specific purpose of your visit here?"

"To contract for iron and locomotives to be used immediately on the new road. I shall remain in the city about two weeks for that purpose."

How foolish are the endeavors of parties to introduce new remedies for coughs and kindred complaints when they should know that the people will have Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and nothing else.

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Dr. Kolbenheyer's Lecture at the Germania Club.

Dr. Kolbenheyer delivered his lecture on "The Nervous System" last evening at the Germania Club to a large and fashionable audience. The lecturer, although speaking on an essentially scientific and technical subject, avoided all mere medical terms, and by his skill and learning presented the subject, dry as it may seem, in a most popular and interesting form, so that the audience listened attentively from beginning to end.

Dr. Kolbenheyer prefaced his remarks by stating that our century, and especially the present decade, was a "nervous" one; that railroads, electricity, the telegraph and other arrangements of to-day occasion such a rapid life, as it were, as to leave merely a breathing spell, and consequently caused nervous suffering. The celebrated American psychologist, Dr. Beard, denominates our present life as "a life of nerveness." It would be more correct, even if more unpleasant, to term it "nervelessness." This fact must impress upon every thinking man the importance of a correct comprehension of the nervous system. The lecturer then drew upon a blackboard a sketch of the primitive cell from which the higher develop themselves, and then proceeded to describe the cerebrum and cerebellum, or large and small brain, as well as the spinal cord. In the cranium are small openings which serve as a passage way for the brain nerves, the optic, auricular and olfactory nerves. Next Dr Kolbenheyer alluded to the optical or sight nerves and the development of the same on the eye as the retina. He explained the construction of the retina, which not alone contains the faculty of sight, but also that of color. He also discussed the Thomas Young color theory and explained with interesting anecdotes Daltonism or color-blindness. The difference between the motor nerves, which produce muscular action, and the sensitive nerves, which are receptive, was then touched upon as well as the vasa-motor nerves, which serve the muscular stratum of the arteries.

TEMPEST IN A TEA POT.

The State Stationer at Loggerheads With the Governor and Auditor.

The State of Missouri, through its Board of Printing Commissioners, annually advertises for bids and proposals for furnishing the executive departments of the State Government with stationery. During the last ten years the contract has been continuously awarded to John J. Daly & Co., on competitive bids. The method of obtaining stationery, as prescribed by law, is by requisition on the Secretary of State, who is ex-officio chairman of the Printing Commission, and the receipt indorsed on the requisition is used as a voucher by the parties holding the contracts. After the stationery and printing contracts are awarded, the executive officers are bound by law to recognize the same and are not permitted to purchase stationery outside, unless to be paid for out of the separate contingent fund of each department, which is generally too closely limited for any such maneuvers. It is alleged that a coolness exists between Gov. Crittenden and Secretary of State McGrath, and that the Governor is not inclined to make requisition in the proper form. Thus, last week his Excellency forwarded to Gast & Co. a large order for envelopes, and another to the New York National Bank Note Company for the same, for all of which the Secretary of State cannot approve an order on the general fund for printing for the executive departments. A conspicuous violation of the stationery contract is State Auditor Walker, who has always shown a desire to purchase outside, and of the stationer he demands fresh figures upon every piece of work, notwithstanding the stationer's detailed bid is on file and duly accepted by the State. As a sample, Mr. Daly has received the following unique communication:

JEFFERSON CITY, March 2, 1882.

John J. Daly & Co., St. Louis:

GENTS—I want 10,000 envelopes within two months. The enclosed envelopes will give an idea what I want—No. 1 the size and form; No. 2 the design and work and color; No. 3 the kind of paper. Do not understand me as making an order, but I want samples and prices. I do not ask very low prices, but reasonable.

JOHN WALKER,
State Auditor.

In reply Mr. Daly forwarded the following reminder:

ST. LOUIS, March 6, 1882.

Hon. John Walker, State Auditor, Jefferson City:

DEAR SIR—Your letter of the 2d of March, asking for prices of envelopes for your office, is to hand, and its contents carefully noted.

The contract for furnishing stationery for each and all of the executive departments was awarded to us on the 29th day of last June. We have faithfully kept our part of the contract and intend to do so, as our bond demands. You seem to ignore the contract and order from other houses the articles we have contracted with the State to furnish. We cannot make new contracts with every new official who disregards the responsibility of the State to keep its part of a contract. Respectfully,

JOHN J. DALY & CO.

The last communication will undoubtedly stir up a hornet's nest, but Mr. Daly thinks it rather strange that the present administration seems unwilling to adhere to its own contract.

Stocks, Bonds, Financial and Wall Street Gossip.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Wall street markets opens weak, with Louisville and Nashville 1½ lower and Northwest ⅞ off. Other changes were slight but in a downward direction. It is understood the St. Paul and Omaha Company will consider this week the matter of increase in the capital stock based upon additional mileage. Thirty is said to have been refused within a few days for a large block of Rochester and Pittsburg stock. The Executive Committee of the Western Union recommended the payment of the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. The quarterly statement will probably show a material increase in the surplus. The pooling arrangement between different cable companies will be of benefit to the Western Union. It is expected to take effect next week. It was reported last evening that Union Pacific is being raided for the purpose of shaking out the Boston holders. A close observer of the market said most of the Union Pacific sold yesterday was short stock. There were some good orders to buy in the vicinity of 111. It is alleged that Gould is a bear on the stock. Orders have been given to employ every available man in pushing the work on the Omaha extension of the Missouri Pacific Road.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE.

Tuesday's receipts fair, and the quality quite decent, consisting mainly of light to good native steers of 800 to 1,300 lbs, which sold well enough. Eastern and interior shippers and local speculators entered the market early in the day and made liberal purchases, so by the hour of noon a clearance was effected at prices ranging from $4 25 to $6 per 100 lbs in extremes. In fact everything sold well. Stock and feeding steers scarce.

WESTERN UNION.

Quarterly Statement—Annual Report of the Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The quarterly statement of the Western Union Telegraph Company shows a net increase for the quarter ending December 31, 1881, of $1,731,235, which, added to the surplus of October 1 of $629,759, gives $2,360,994; deducting appropriations for dividends, etc., leaves a surplus January 1 of $1,035,273. This statement closes the last quarter of the first year of operations of the company since taking up the American Union and Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies, with the following results for the calendar year of 1881: Gross revenues, $16,863,396; expenses, $9,489,269; net profits, $7,379,127, from which have been appropriated dividends, interest, new construction, etc., $6,492,139, leaving a surplus of $886,988, which, added to the surplus the first of the year, gives a surplus of January 1st as stated above. The net revenue for the quarter ending March 31 is partially estimated at $1,550,000, which added to the surplus and deducting appropriations for dividend, etc., leaves a surplus for the quarter of $1,259,073. A dividend of 1½ was declared payable April 15.

UNION PACIFIC.

At the annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad to-day the following directors were elected: Sidney Dillon, Elisha Atkins, Frederick L. Ames, Ezra H. Baker, S. H. H. Clark, F. Gordon Dexter, David Dows, Greenville M. Dodge, T. T. Eckert, Jay Gould, Solon Humphreys, Russell Sage, Augustus Schell Wm. L. Scott and John Sharp. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Sidney Dillon was re-elected president, and a quarterly dividend of 1¾ declared. The total earnings this year were $24,258,817; last year $22,455,134. Expenses this year, $12,480,342; last year, $10,545,119. Net earnings this year $11,778,474, against $11,910,015 last year. The decrease in earnings is accounted for by the fact that the company laid $500,749 worth of rails in excess of last year. The debt of the company is $4,035,078, which is more than covered by available bonds, securities and the supplies on hand. The company holds securities in stocks and bonds of other companies for $51,773,980, twenty-two millions of which are quoted at par and pay dividends. Over twenty-five million of these securities net the company 2¾ per cent profit per annum. The company owns material on hand valued at $3,164,476 and has saved half a million dollars in the purchase of steel rails. Freight carriage increased 122,859,000 tons for the year. The company recently obtained from the United States Supreme Court a judgment against the United States Government for $2,000,000 back charges, which will be worth in the future at least $500,000 yearly to the company.

A SLICK SWINDLE.

St. Louis Salesmen and a Bogus Texas Firm in a Ring,

And Defrauding St. Louis and New York Merchants on a Wholesale Scale.

The Queer Firm of A. P. Ryan, and How it Did Business—A Clever Fraud.

A very clever swindle has been unearthed, which promises to develop features that will be of interest, not only to the merchants of St. Louis, but those throughout the country. The facts in the case secured by a POST-DISPATCH reporter, after an extensive search, are these:

In December last the Associated Press announced the failure of the dry goods house of A. P. Ryan, of Fort Worth, Texas, which fact caused quite a sensation among the wholesale dry goods and clothing men of St. Louis, quite a number of whom held claims for large amounts against the house. Among the most deeply interested were J. H. Wear, Boogher & Co., who were involved to the extent of about $5,000; Crow, Hargadine & Co., about $4,000; Chase & Cabot, $3,500; Wm. H. Kellogg & Co., about $3,500; Schwab & Co., about $5,000, and a number of other houses for smaller amounts. Besides these it was known that H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York, were in for about $8,000.

Several of the St. Louis firms immediately began to take steps towards the recovery of the amounts due them, and a state of affairs was uncovered which carried the conviction that a very

BOLD FRAUD HAD BEEN PERPETRATED.

It appears that about two years ago Mr. Ryan started in business at Fort Worth with a small stock purchased in St. Louis for cash and was apparently building up a good trade. His standing in Fort Worth seemed to be good, and as he always paid cash for his goods he soon established a fair credit here as well as with Claflin & Co. in New York, where he pursued the same cash course. Finally he began to buy small bills on short time, and as payment was made promptly his credit remained unimparied. Last spring a young man named R. E. Cross, who was then a salesman for Chase & Cabot, and formerly held a similar position with Wm. H. Kellogg & Co., announced that he was about to resign his position to take the management of the Ryan house in Fort Worth. It is said that to some he asserted that he was to be Ryan's partner, while to others he was going as manager under salary, but to all he stated that he made the change in order to better his condition, and as he was then getting a salary of $3,000 a year it was inferred that he had

FALLEN INTO A PERFECT BONANZA.

Soon after his connection with Ryan the latter came to St. Louis and bought goods, and afterward the purchasing was done by Cross. At that time it was supposed that these purchases were confined to one or two houses here, but it now transpires that the same were distributed liberally and generally among the houses here where credit could be obtained.

The first intimation received here that the Fort Worth house was not upon a solid financial basis was the news that Mrs. A. P. Ryan had attached the stock to satisfy a claim against her husband of $10,000, money loaned. A traveling salesman named Williams, who represented the clothing house of Schwab & Co., happened to be in Fort Worth at the time, and after communicating the state of affairs to his employers immediately placed another attachment on the stock. Chase & Cabot then followed with an attachment to satisfy their claim, and there the matter rested until about a month ago. At first it was thought that the failure was legitimate, but facts began to leak out which put a different aspect upon the affair and prompted H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York, and Wear, Boogher & Co., of this city, to make a further investigation. It was then discovered that a greater portion of Ryan's stock, the value of which is variously estimated at from had been transferred to his brother, Volney Ryan, who keeps a store at Paris, Texas, and C.C. Ellis, a merchant doing business at Honey Grove, Texas. Whether this transfer had been made by a cash sale or without any consideration was not learned.

Chase & Cabot now joined with Claflin & Co. and Wear, Boogher & Co. to attach the stocks at Paris and Honey Grove, and last week an attorney was sent down to investigate. He employed Messrs. Hale & Scott, attorneys at Paris, and Templeton & Carter, at Fort Worth, to assist him. The attorney returned yesterday and reports that he succeeded in intercepting and attaching ninety-eight trunks and forty-three boxes, containing goods en route from Fort Worth to Paris and Honey Grove, and that he has secured sufficient goods to satisfy the claims of the three houses he represents. A full investigation of the case will be made by the grand jury at Fort Worth, and it is claimed that sufficient evidence has been obtained to indict A. P. Ryan, Volney Ryan and R. E. Cross, and to establish the fact that a joint conspiracy to defraud existed between these three men and a number of St. Louis salesmen. Mr. Bowman states that a thorough investigation will be made which promises to develop one of the most interesting conspiracy cases on record. Altogether A. P. Ryan managed to secure about $60,000 worth of goods from St. Louis merchants, and it is charged that he and his copartners were materially assisted in this enterprise by several St. Louis salesmen.

SEVENTY-TWO HOURS ON A BICYCLE.

The Feat Mlle. Louise Armainde Will Undertake To-morrow.

Mlle. Louise Armainde, the celebrated bicyclist, will attempt a feat this week which, if accomplished, will discount the performances of Hazael, Rowell and all the six-day walkers. She proposes to ride 600 miles on a bicycle in six days. A track will be prepared at Armory Hall for the purpose, the race against time beginning at 10 a. m. to-morrow morning. Miss Armaindo, in the test, will use a 50-inch bicycle, and she says that, although she has never tried the feat, she feels confident that she will go through it successfully. The plucky little athlete has been in preparation for the race for several weeks, and she is now in prime condition. The great trial will begin to-morrow at 10 a. m. precisely. Judges, time-keepers, etc., will be selected and the laps made will be carefully recorded. Miss Armainde proposes to ride each day from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. It will thus be seen that she proposes to ride twelve hours a day and to make the distance marked out. She will thus be compelled to ride eight miles and one-third every hour that she is on the track. During the week the bicyclist will be occasionally accompanied by Prof. F. S. Rollinson, the champion of America, and other well known riders. The members of the Missouri Bicycle Club will also take part in the race. Music will be in attendance every afternoon and evening. The impression is that the lady will not be able to cover the distance in the time named, the strain of so long a run being too much for her. She herself is, however, very confident that she will cover the ground, and she declares that she will do her utmost to be successful. This is the first time the feat has been attempted.

HEALING THE WOUNDS.

A Sister's Grievance and a Divorce Wiped From the Docket.

The trial docket of Judge Horner's court this morning was unexpectedly relieved of two cases for which all the necessary arrangements had been made. In the one instance Miss Emma E. Hurst, sister of the proprietor of Hurst's Hotel, on Fourth street, was plaintiff. This young lady has previously figured as a litigant against her brother in another division of the court, suing him for compensation for services as seamstress and factotum of the hotel. In the suit before Judge Horner she alleged that on two occasions in July, 1880, her brother grievously assaulted her, whipped her, threw her on the floor and tore her clothes, for all of which she asked damages in the sum of $800. For a second cause of action Miss Hurst alleged that her brother broke into her sleeping apartment at the hotel, pitched her trunk and wardrobe out into the hall, choked and whipped her, and tore the clothing which she had on at the time. For the second application of manual discipline Miss Hurst claimed $1,600 from her brother. When Judge Horner called up the case this morning a memorandum was handed to the clerk: "Dismissed by the plaintiff," signifying that peace once more reigns in the Hurst family. Mr. Hurst had filed an answer in court alleging that his sister, on the occasion mentioned, had raised a great disturbance in the hotel, annoying his family and the guests by yelling and screaming through the hallway, and that in laying hands upon her he used no more force than was necessary to keep her quiet.

The Dannenbrink Divorce.

The second case which the court was prepared to bear and dispose of was the contested divorce of Henry against Christina Dannenbrink. The husband stated that the marriage took place in November, 1879, in Randolph county, Ill. They lived together until January, 1881. Mr. Dannenbrink alleged that his wife indulged in tippling habits and under such influence was very cruel to his children by a former marriage; that she whipped them so severely that blood would frequently tell the tale, and that on one occasion, her husband alleged, she drew a carving knife on him. To all of this Mrs. Dannenbrink filed an answer and cross-bill alleging that her condition was rendered intolerable by the conduct of her husband; that he whipped her repeatedly, and attested his regard for her by kicks and blows and vile abuse. Judge Horner called the case this morning, whereupon Ed. L. Gottschalk stepped forward and announced a dismissal, the parties having agreed to kiss and make up.

VEHICLE LICENSE.

A New Way of Collecting the Tax on Conveyances.

Nearly a Thousand Owners and Drivers of Unlicensed Vehicles Arrested by the Police—Over $100,000 Revenue Lost to the City.

When the police platoons assembled yesterday morning to go on duty, at each of the main stations they were instructed to arrest all violators of the vehicle license ordinance. By 9 o'clock last night 500 drivers and owners had had the hand of the law laid upon them for failing to comply with the provisions of the city ordinances, and to-day they were arraigned in the Carondelet, First and Second District Police Courts. The cases are made under ordinance 37, articles 1 and 3, the substance of which is not generally known: "There shall be annually levied and collected a license tax upon all cabs, hacks or hackney coaches, private carriages, barouches, buggies, wagons, omnibuses, carts, drays, and other vehicles using the streets for trade or any other purpose, public or private, whether the owner resides in the city or out of it, as follows: on each buggy or sulky $3, hand-cart $1, horse-cart $3, cab $5, dray or furniture car $10, baggage wagon $12, two-horse omnibus $15, four-horse omnibus $20, six-horse-omnibus $25, each hack or hackney carriage $12, one horse private carriage $3, two-horse private carriage $10, each one-horse barouche $3, each two-horse barouche $5, each hotel coach or carriage $15, each heavy truck $30, each sprinkling wagon $10, each one-horse wagon not before mentioned $3, each two-horse wagon not before mentioned $10, each three-horse wagon not before mentioned $12, each four-horse wagon not before mentioned $15, for each five and six-horse vehicle not before mentioned $30."

It is further ordained by the municipal laws that the license plate shall be placed in a conspicuous and particular position, so that the officers yesterday had but little difficulty in deciding who was wanted and who not. No class of vehicles was spared—physicians' rigs, trucks, baggage-wagons, carriages, drays, carts and every shape of vehicle were examined that came to the notice of the officers, and this morning a long line of different rigs stood on Clark avenue from Eleventh to Thirteenth and on Biddle and Fifth streets awaiting the disposition of the cases in court. When the arrests were made yesterday the news of the intentions of the police spread rapidly about town, and at 2 p. m. it was impossible to reach a desk in the Collector's office at the Court-house, which was packed with owners and drivers, anxious to procure licenses and escape arrest. A number of those arrested secured licenses at once, and to-day presented them in the Police Court, thereby securing a dismissal of the cases against them. A few years ago the owners associated and organized for the purpose of testing the validity of the city ordinances prescribing the license, but it was found to be good, and the test ended by the contestants paying the amount of tax prescribed.

The raid yesterday was the result of a consultation between the Comptroller, Collector and Police Department, the object being to increase the municipal revenue. By the failure of drivers to pay the required tax on private conveyances and business vehicles the city is annually cheated out of over $100,000 revenue, which it is now proposed to collect with the assistance of the police department. To-day the noble work of the peelers was carried on with the same vigor as yesterday, and all day long the station houses were crowded with prisoners' bondsmen and friends. In cases where the arrest interfered with business personal bonds were taken, with the place of business and other necessary information, and the prisoners were released.

Important Notice—Words of Warning!

We desire to give this friendly word of warning to whom it may concern, that all persons who have been or are now dealing in a preparation called "Clayton & Russell's Celebrated Stomach Bitters," put upon the market by Adams & Co., of New York, render themselves liable to prosecution and damages, as said article has been pronounced by the U. S. Circuit Court, Southern District, New York, in a decision rendered by his Honor, Judge Blatchford, February, 1882, as being an imitation of Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters, and who granted a decree of perpetual injunction with damages against the said Adams & Co., for violation of our Trade Mark in the premises. The principle of this important decision applies with equal force to any article of Bitters, the labels of which bear a general resemblance to our Trade Mark, as well as to the refilling of our old bottles with spurious stuff, or selling in bulk any article purporting to be our preparation, and hence this friendly word of caution. We never fail to convict, as the Court Records of New Orleans, St. Louis, New York and other points fully affirm. HOSTETTER & SMITH.

TENNYSON'S NEW POEM,

"THE CHARGE OF THE HEAVY BRIGADE,"

Has met with a great deal of adverse criticism from the American press. Whatever its merits or defects may be, we beg leave for time to settle; but we are happy to state that the opinion of the good people of St. Louis regarding another subject, viz., our enlarged and elegantly decorated establishment, has been unanimously expressed to the effect that there is nothing equal to it in the West.

However, to change the subject from CRITICISM TO CLOTHING, we would respectfully state that our daily arrivals of

CHOICE SPRING GARMENTS

Are unusually enticing, and deserve the attention of all buyers of MEN'S OR BOYS' CLOTHING.
